FEARLESS-FOSDICK FERRET named Shazam proved a ferocious crime-fighter when a burglar broke into a Winnipeg home this week. The pet's owner Glenn Eros arrived back from work to find a would-be thief nursing a badly bloodied arm where he had been bitten by the 36-centimetre-long, 0.7-kilogram critter. By holding the intruder at bay, the ferret foiled a fast get-away.

Surgery to expand at Jubilee

A $1 million-a-year program to expand surgical capacity of Royal Jubilee Hospital was announced today by the provincial health ministry.

It involves a $100,000 capital renovation of Memorial Pavilion — the former DVA hospital — and will be in operation in about six months.

"When all the necessary renovations have been made the hospital will be able to handle an additional 2,500 surgical cases a year," said Health Minister Rafe Mair.

The cost of staff and supplies to keep the extra beds in service is estimated at $1 million annually.

Renovation cost will be shared with the Capital Regional Hospital District.

The program is designed for short-stay surgical cases, for patients requiring about three days of post-operative hospital care.

It is distinct from the regular hospital surgical workload and day-care surgery.

20 years left to head off the apocalypse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mass poverty, malnutrition, overcrowding, food shortages and deterioration of the planet's water and atmosphere resources — that's a bleak U.S. government prediction that says civilization has perhaps 20 years to act to head off worldwide disaster.

The three-year U.S. government study released today warns that the world faces those grim problems unless nations co-operate as never before to head them off.

In response to the Global 2000 Report to the President, President Carter has written top government officials that unless decisive action is taken to fight the current trends, the next 20 years may see a continuation of serious food and population problems, steady loss of croplands, forests, plant and animal species, fisheries, and degradation of the earth's water and atmosphere.

The presidential report estimated real food and energy prices at least doubling by the turn of the century and the gap between rich and poor growing wider.

The report said its findings "point to increasing potential for international conflict and increasing stress on international financial arrangements."

The study, headed by the President's Council on Environmental Quality and the state department, said that, if anything, it is probably too optimistic.

President Carter, who ordered the study in 1977, immediately announced appointment of a Presidential Task Force on Global Resources and Environment to recommend top-priority studies "as soon as possible" and to provide a progress report within six months.

The report did not suggest specific policies, but concluded that "sustainable economic development, coupled with environmental protection, resource management and family planning is essential."

The report included these findings:

— World food production may increase 90 per cent from 1970 to the year 2000, but population will swell more than 50 per cent from about four billion in 1975 to about 6.35 billion in 2000.

— Per-capita food production, therefore, will increase only about 15 per cent and those already eating well will get most of the increase, leaving the poor of South Asia, the Middle East and Africa with little more food, and maybe less, than they get now.

— Farmland will increase only about four percent; increased food production must rely on techniques using oil and natural gas, causing food prices to spiral upward along with energy prices.

Priests arrested by Bolivian army

LA PAZ (CP) — Soldiers and armed civilians loyal to Bolivia's new right-wing military regime have arrested 11 priests and raided several Roman Catholic parishes, church officials charged Wednesday.

The arrests began soon after last Thursday's military coup blocked the anticipated democratic installation of a left-wing president. None of the 11 priests has been heard from since they were detained, church officials said.

"Some parishes have people hiding from the government," said an American priest who asked not to be named.

Spokesman John Tratner said the department has received "reliable reports" that the Bolivian military is holding hundreds of dissidents.

Tratner said the department believes the military has taken some of its prisoners to a centre near the capital, La Paz, where they are being beaten and tortured.

Diplomatic sources said opponents of Gen. Luis Garcia Meza's new regime set dynamite to the Pampas water works in the mountains above La Paz, reducing water pressure in the city.

The military command has set up machine-gun nests at some public utilities and deployed tanks, armored cars and troops at strategic points.

In the tin and zinc mining region south of La Paz, miners claimed to be resisting troops sent to subdue them in Oruro, and Potosi, about 416 kilometres southeast of La Paz.

The miners' radio said several bridges had been blown up on highways east of La Paz, stranding travelers.

It said 5,000 peasants were gathering near the Siglo Veinte mine, 240 kilometers southeast of the capital, and were organizing with miners into an effective army.

A high-ranking church source said the papal nuncio, the Vatican's representative to Bolivia, asked the government to account for priests who have disappeared since the takeover and provide guarantees for the safety of church officials.

The source said the government replied it would not recognize any church request until interim president Lidia Gueiler had left the nuncio's La Paz residence, where she had sought asylum. The source said Mrs. Gueiler has a safe-conduct pass from the government and planned to leave shortly.

The military ousted Gueiler in order to head off the expected choice by Congress of Hernan Siles Zuazo, a leftist, as presi-

Car crashes kill 2

Two women died in separate traffic accidents Wednesday and police say luck prevented further fatalities in a third mishap.

Dorothy Patricia Varney, 39, of 2268 West 45th Ave., Vancouver, was killed when the van in which she was riding was in collision with a gravel truck at Trans-Canada Highway and Helmcken Road about 11:20 a.m. Wednesday.

Driver of the van was Edwin Varney, 37.

Also injured in the accident were Ocean Varney, 10, Catherine Varney, 22 months, both in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital, and Jonathan Dolphin, in serious condition in Victoria General Hospital.

Driver of the truck was Dennis Marie Ridley, 22, of 201 Portsmouth.

An elderly woman whose name has not been released was killed in a head-on collision involving a car and camper truck south of Mill Bay on the Trans-Canada. The woman is believed to be from the U.S.

Another unidentified woman from the same car is reported in serious condition in Cowichan District Hospital.

The driver of the camper, Raymond McKee of Fruitvale, and his wife were treated and released from hospital.

Three people received minor injuries in a five-vehicle accident on the Pat Bay Highway at McDonald Park Road Wednesday about 11:05 a.m. but police say it was just luck that prevented worse injuries.

Sidney RCMP say the accident occurred when a farm tractor swerved to miss a highway sign lying by the side of the road.

The tractor was hit from the rear by a second vehicle.

The vehicles were coming from the ferry and traffic was rerouted for an hour until they were removed and the highway cleaned.

When waste oil is discarded, it can create serious environmental problems, especially if it seeps into fresh water supplies.

"People forget that storm sewers often lead directly to the nearest stream or lake. Heavy rains or groundwater action can also transport oil dumped on the ground into clean waterways. Burning the untreated oil pollutes the atmosphere."

Oil peace to hike gas 7¢ a gal.?

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canadian motorists will soon be paying seven cents a gallon more at the gasoline pumps (about 1½¢ a litre) if Alberta accepts Ottawa's latest oil-pricing offer — and the cost of gasoline will jump by 16 cents a gallon next year, according to an Ottawa newspaper.

As Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed began day-long energy discussions at Trudeau's summer residence 30 kilometres north of here, today's Ottawa Journal reported the federal government planned to offer Alberta a $2 a barrel rise in oil prices this year with an increase of $4.50 a year in succeeding years.

If this is correct, and Lougheed accepts the proposal, oil prices will rise by a total of $3 a barrel this year, including the July 1 increase of $1 a barrel under the old agreement.

Failure to reach common ground today would set the stage for a bitter constitutional showdown the two parties say they are anxious to avoid.

Fractional business tax hike proposed for centre

City council's finance committee today took action which will likely mean an increase in the business tax of one-eighth of one per cent to finance the city's share of start-up costs involved with the convention centre next year.

The committee set no figures but an increase of one eighth of one per cent would be needed to raise $75,000, the city's share of estimated 1981 operating costs when the convention centre gets under way.

In an attempt to settle a controversy over the business tax and trade licence fees, aldermen also decided to ask city staff for a complete review of the issue, the first in nearly 30 years.

City manager Jim Bramley and controller Mason Sheldrick estimated it would take at least six months to go over the complicated taxation issue and come up with recommendations for reform.

Last year, Victoria businessmen volunteered for a one-half-per-cent increase in the four-per-cent business tax to raise some $300,000. The money would be earmarked for convention centre deficits and tourist promotion activities.

Finance committee chairman Ald. Frank Carson and city staff made a counter proposal which they said would have been fairer—an end to the practice of deducting trade licence fees from business taxes.

But this suggestion angered Victoria's business community, particularly doctors, lawyers and other professionals who felt they would have had to carry an unfair share of the burden.

Now trade licence fees range from $100 for most professionals to around $2,000 for financial institutions.

1 grape shoplifted

MONTGOMERY, W.Va. (UPI) — An Iranian student has been charged with shoplifting one grape at a grocery store.

Municipal Judge Carl Harris conducted an hour and a half hearing Tuesday in the case involving Seyeshrash Mirhadi. The judge defayed a decision in order to study a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision which he said could affect the city's shoplifting ordinance.

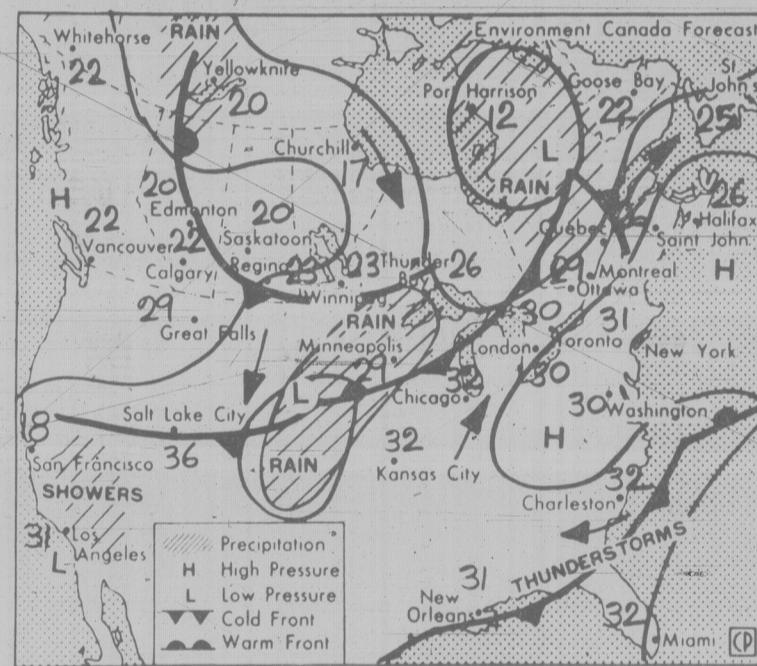

Mirhadi is a student at West Virginia Tech.

Kroger store manager Larry Bowyers testified he saw Mirhadi put the white seedless grape in his mouth June 13. He said he couldn't give the value of one grape, but the complaint said the grapes were worth $1.39 a pound.

Mirhadi was arrested by a police officer who didn't read him his constitutional rights until after they were at the police station, according to Tuesday's testimony.

Mirhadi's attorney said shoplifting is a misdemeanor, with a $300 maximum fine and a possible 90-day jail sentence.

the weather

A ridge of high pressure over the province was responsible for generally clear skies overnight. A disturbance crossing the northeast pacific however is gradually eroding the northern portion of the ridge. As a result a low pressure cell is spreading rapidly across the north coast and over the central interior early today. Rain associated with the disturbance will become showery as it crosses the north coast mountains. Generally sunny conditions are forecast for southern B.C. today and Friday as the ridge holds over the area.

Childish games end, but puzzles unsolved

SOMEWHERE OVER MOOSE JAW — The childish parliamentary games being finished ("we will fight on the beaches — at least until midnight.") until Oct. 15th, we flee Coma City for more civilized surroundings.

Several puzzles remain unsolved.

There is the matter of what appointments ad in the business pages, informing a yawning public that Donald S. Macdonald has been appointed to the board of McDonnell Douglas, the noted builders of airplanes that Ottawa buys.

Isn't this where we came in? The Hon. Donald S. Macdonald, a former minister of defence among other things, as you'll recall accepted a somewhat eyebrow-raising McDonnell Douglas directorship after leaving the ministry of Pierre Elliot and the Reincarnates.

Came the time when Trudeau announced his first (and not last?) blushing retirement, Macdonald stepped into the phone booth, shucked aside his previous protestations of humbleness and emerged as a lusty candidate for the top.

Among the embarrassments he had to divest were the clutch of corporate directorships — Shell and airplanes and pulp mills and others.

Now that — for the second time — he is climbing aboard McDonnell Douglas does that mean he is giving up his leadership chances — again?

Just asking.

There is, also, the irrepressible Toronto Sun — the Billy Carter of journalism — which on Wednesday had as its one and only editorial (an admirable trait greatly to be admired) a haughty entitled "Royal Baggage."

It begins with the usual Sun tentative nature: "There is something ludicrously hypocritical and in exquisite bad taste about the state visit of Princess Margaret to Canada. She is out West being given the top hat and curtsey treatment as if she were something special rather than Royal Baggage who has, by her lifestyle, forfeited all right to respect and homage."

Moving right along, through "parasite" and "accident-prone" and Roddy Llewellyn, the stoutly-monarchist Sun asks:

"But why should Canadian money go into bringing her out here? Why should our officials, politicians, Armed Forces and public be exposed to this somewhat unwholesome self-indulgent Royal Baggage?"

Why indeed? Doesn't the Sun know? Because Pierre Trudeau, the closest republican, long ago cottoned onto the sleazy trick of all to kill Canadian interest in another country's monarchy: Giving us more of it than we really can endure.

Smart trick. Smart man.

There is, also, the most beautiful language of the week, coming from Romeo Leblanc, essentially a good guy who used to be a CBC correspondent in Washington and an agonizing press secretary to the lofty Trudeau before being swallowed by the compromises of the Liberal cabinet.

At the session of the International Whaling Commission in Brighton, England, our proud country lined up with those other great democracies Russia, Chile, South Korea, South Africa and Spain, to kill off a moratorium on the killing of whales.

The 24-country commission, a majority — 13 nations including the U.S. — voted against the slaughter of an endangered species, but under commission rules 18 votes were needed to push through the mere pause in all commercial killing of whales.

The opposition of course was led by the Soviet Union and Japan, the world's last major whaling nations. Canada isn't even affected because there is no whaling industry in this country anymore.

So here is Canada, which last year bravely abstained in the voting but this week supported the slaughter through Leblanc: "There is ample scientific evidence that certain stocks, not numerous, can sustain a modest harvest."

Can sustain a modest harvest? Beautiful! Bafflegab revisited.

Romeo, Romeo, where art thou fuzification?

There is the leftover note on Ronnie Reagan. When the clean-jawed actor decided his first-ever step into politics would be to try for governor of California, incumbent Pat Brown (father of Jerry) told an audience that Reagan reminded him of the incident when passengers of a jet discovered to their horror that the pilot had never flown before.

"Don't worry," the pilot soothed the panic-stricken passengers over the intercom. "I'll admit this is my first flight, but I've always had an interest in aviation."

Treat Indian as citizen: MLA

A section of a provincial government manual which urges highways department crews to treat Indians living on reserves with kid gloves is discriminatory and should be removed immediately. Frank Howard (NDP — Skeena) said Wednesday.

The construction foreman's manual issued by the provincial highways ministry tells crews to use caution when working on reserves because the Indians are motivated by emotions instead of law and logical reasoning, he said.

"It's a special note for construction on Indian reserves and it says to construction crews, 'Look, pay attention, be careful when you're working on Indian reserves because they are more militant, more knowledgeable of legal matters and are more likely to be motivated by their emotions than by law and logical reasoning,'" Howard said.

"Really what it is doing is denigrating the position of the native people and saying to construction crews and to department of highway personnel, 'Just watch what you're doing here — treat these people like somebody who's ready to rear back and shoot you because they're operated by emotion.'

Howard said Indians should be "treated as citizens of this land in a fair and decent and proper way."

Highways Minister Alex Fraser said he is not aware of the section but will order it removed if it does exist and is discriminatory.

Ross Dam rehearing denied

SEATTLE (UPI) — A U.S. federal appeals court ruling has denied a rehearing requested by opponents of a plan by Seattle City Light to raise Ross Dam by 121 feet, flooding portions of British Columbia.

City attorney Doug Jewett said Wednesday the ruling was issued in Washington by the full 11-member District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals.

Jewett said the teachers had asked for a rehearing of their case after a three-member panel upheld City Light's licence for the proposed project last month.

But none of the 11 judges sought a rehearing, so the question of whether to rehear the case was never discussed. Instead, Jewett said, Chief Justice Skelly Wright issued a brief opinion denying the petition for a review of the case.

City Light first advanced the High Ross Dam proposal raising the dam by 121 feet 10 years ago.

B.C.'s 30,000 teachers have learned a lesson — they must become more militant if they want to make any gains, B.C. Teachers Federation vice-president Larry Kuehn said Wednesday.

He said the B.C. Government Employees Union got an increase in pension indexing to about 15 per cent while the teachers get indexing only to eight per cent.

The BCGEU showed its muscle with province-wide rallies — and we didn't. There's a clear message for us," he said.

Kuehn said the teachers met Tuesday with Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe and were given a flat "no" to their request that teachers also be granted equal pension indexing with the BCGEU.

The BCTF spokesman said the timing of the announcement caught the teachers off guard.

"Most of our executive members are away on holidays and, of course, it is vacation time for the teachers. We can't get an executive meeting together until August but we will be fighting this thing."

No effective action could be taken until September, when teachers return.

The only time the teachers made any gains on the pension issue was in 1971 when they held a one-day strike.

"That's the only action that seems to get results with this government."

He said the college teachers also failed to get any improvement in their indexing.

Now you're talkin' taste.

N-waste dumped without approval

OTTAWA (CP) — The Atomic Energy Control Board said Wednesday that nuclear waste was dumped into the Pacific Ocean in the 1950s, without the board's approval.

Larry Henry, head of the board's nuclear waste management branch, said the board learned, almost by accident in 1959 or early 1960 that the University of British Columbia at Vancouver had dropped insignificant amounts of radioactive waste about 1,000 fathoms deep off the coast.

Fred Boyd, a scientific adviser to the board, said officials learned of the dumping when it was discussed briefly at an international conference.

"We then asked UBC to supply information about the situation and to cease and desist."

Shipbuilders' alternative

Canadian industrialists who compete in world markets without government subsidies probably are a touch puzzled by the nation's shipbuilders.

The Canadian shipbuilding industry for nearly two decades has existed on the generosity of the Canadian taxpayer. In the early 1960s, for example, the government paid up to 40 per cent of the cost of new ships and major repairs.

The subsidy was necessary to make Canadian shipyards competitive with European companies which had lower labor costs. Without the subsidy, the Canadian ship building industry would have collapsed.

In more recent years, as European wages and material costs increased, the subsidy to Canadians decreased to 20 per cent. And this week that subsidy was reduced to nine per cent.

The sentiments of Victoria shipbuilders who predict massive job cutbacks will no doubt be echoed in Vancouver and on the east coast. But their protests are tempered by the comments of H.M. Walsh, president of the Canadian Shipbuilders and Repairers Association who wrote last year that domestic shipyards are now competitive with Europe. He said the turnaround is due not only to changes in international currencies but also to major productivity increases in the last six to 10 years.

The B.C. government is naturally perturbed. Aside from the possible loss of jobs and tax dollars from an industry slow-down, the subsidy will directly affect Victoria's treasury.

The B.C. Ferry Corporation, which is heavily subsidized by the province, spends millions of dollars in B.C. shipyards every year on repairs, modifications and new ferries. Two new super-ferries of the Cowichan class are being constructed in B.C. The corporation is a beneficiary of the federal subsidy.

It is ironic that the level of government least able to afford large subsidies to industry is being chastised a province whose economic prospects are among the best in the country.

The point that is being missed by Victoria and Ottawa is that there is an alternative to the subsidy program.

Canada has the longest coastline in the world, it relies on export markets for much of its prosperity and yet has only a handful of ocean-going freighters operating under a Canadian flag. The country pays foreign shippers $3 billion a year to transport Canadian goods.

If British Columbia and other maritime provinces collaborated with the federal government and required a certain percentage of Canadian goods to be transported on Canadian-built ships, the talk of subsidies to shipyards might become a thing of the past.

trans-Atlantic jaunt and land in Paris.

The problem according to Canadian officials is that Eagle doesn't have eyes that see in the fog. His aerodynamic wing, under Canada's rules of the air is an airplane. As such, no flight instruments, no flight.

The same day this adventure-some aviator dropped into Baie Comeau. With a pilot's learner permit in his hip pocket and plenty of nerve, the Californian was headed for the Atlantic Ocean where, winds permitting, he would retrace Lindberg's vestigator found that this company had been carrying passengers for years in flagrant violation of Canada's safety rules.

He told of aircraft with holes in the fuselage, doors being strapped shut with seat belts, overloaded aircraft and inexperienced pilots. Nobody is quite sure what the Transport Canada officials were up to while all this was happening.

But the officials are in Baie Comeau now, as Eagle can attest. He might get his glider out of the impound hangar by installing a few passenger seats.

'This place actually works'

OTTAWA — It wasn't easy to tell whose smile was the broader—one, that of Ged Baldwin, the 73-year-old ex-MP who had just awarded a "Straight A" to the government's freedom of information bill, or that of Francis Fox, the minister responsible, who after doing his own stint before the cameras, had settled into the back of the press theatre to hear what Baldwin would say.

For Baldwin, the veteran Conservative who retired last February after 22 years in the Commons, and who is to freedom of information reform as is Pierre Trudeau to constitutional reform, its guru and godfather, being able to praise Liberal legislation meant, as he said later, "This place actually does things happen, if you just stick around long enough."

For Secretary of State Fox, Baldwin's accolade was the political equivalent of winning the daily double at the races. His legislation now is shielded from criticism, even of the most niggling kind: His own political career, stalled since he resigned from the cabinet two years ago, has begun to move again.

Most open

"About Fox's freedom of information legislation, there isn't a great deal to be said, other than that it is probably the most open of its kind in the world other than that in Sweden where they believe in letting everything hang out, including the prime minister's personal mail, and the tax returns of individual citizens."

No wonder the Swedes are such a gloomy lot. In our legislation, sinfulness, in the shape of tax returns, still will be allowed to flourish in the dark. Also national security and international relations, for which exemptions obviously are needed. But just about everything else will be cast out into the white glare of public scrutiny.

Such openness, it doesn't need to be said, is entirely un-Liberal. For a decade, the Trudeau government was about as keen to give out information as it was to give up power; indeed, Liberal managerial philosophy, was based on the presumption that the less people knew, the more easily they would be impressed, and the more grateful they would be.

A year ago, as you just may remember, Canadians got so disgruntled that they actually heaved out the Liberals. The shock was salutary, it turns out. Freedom of information is important for the credibility of democratic institutions," Fox says now. Important also for the image of the Liberals.

Fox's bill is almost a carbon copy of the legislation brought down by the Conservatives during their brief term in office. The key to its credibility is that, unlike earlier draft Liberal legislation, it allows citizens to appeal, first to an information commissioner and subsequently to the Federal Court, in instances where minister refuse to hand over files.

Where Fox's bill is different, it is better. Third parties affected by information collected about others now will be able to make a case for its release; in those instances where the government refuses to give up information, the information commissioner will be able to represent claimants before the Federal Court, and so spare them legal costs.

Except for the odd jot or tittle here and there, the letter of the law really couldn't be improved. The spirit with which it will be applied may be something else.

From now on it will be "automatic" to release "cabinet discussion papers" or the factual analyses of situations prepared by civil servants

General spirit

Two reasons for hope exist though. Fox does sound as though he means what he says: He has already begun briefing civil servants on how to fulfill the new legislation, and although it probably won't be passed by Parliament until next winter, he expects ministers and civil servants to "live up to its general spirit" from September onwards.

Also, Baldwin still will be around. His delighted "discovery" that the political process does, in the end, work, has given him the encouragement to go after his next target reform of the Official Secrets Act.

Democrats losing unionists

LINDEN, N.J. — The shifts were changing at the huge General Motors assembly plant down the road, and the bar in the basement of the union hall was filling up. After a few cold beers the talk grew heated, and if Jimmy Carter had been listening, the words of these auto workers might have chilled him.

"The current administration has done nothing for the working man," asserted Ralph Banks, a wiry Vietnam veteran. "I don't say Reagan is any better than Carter, but at least he's new. I'd like to give him a chance to see what he can do."

"The men are saying that now," chimed in Thomas Brown, a black union leader. "But once they find out what Reagan is all about, I think they'll change their minds."

Provide jobs

"The Republicans might be for the rich man," retorted Henry Anderson, a spot welder with a thick beard. "But when they're in there, they provide jobs. When Nixon and Ford were in, how many people were laid off?"

"You certainly don't blame Carter for that, do you?" Brown asked. "Who else can you blame?" Anderson shouted.

The blue-collar worker, particularly in key states like New Jersey, is rapidly becoming the favorite target of this year's election campaign, the most sought-after ally by the presidential campaigners. And no one is courted more ardently than the auto workers, who are not only highly visible and highly paid but badly hurt by the recession. Unemployment is running 25 percent among auto workers around the country, and in Local 595 in Linden, about 4,300 members are working, down from 5,800 several years ago.

At the Republican National Convention in Detroit last week, Ronald Reagan met with unemployed workers and had lunch with Douglas A. Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers, who supports Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts for the Democratic nomination. A week earlier in Detroit, President Carter announced a package of proposals to aid the hard-pressed industry. Fraser told the president that increasing unemployment was driving workers into the Reagan camp, and dozens of interviews here in Linden, a few miles south of Newark, clearly supported that assertion.

Union leaders such as Brown may retain their traditional loyalty to the Democratic Party, but the rank and file is a different story.

"I don't know how to get them to support Carter; I don't know what handle to grab hold of," Edward F. Gray, regional director for the auto union, conceded. "Their anger is very real and very deep. Most of the members who are concerned with politics feel they have been betrayed by Jimmy Carter, and that's a terribly difficult thing to deal with."

Without a doubt, Carter will get plenty of votes from the auto workers. The members are angry now, but many of the older ones, in particular, concede that it would be hard to break the patterns of a lifetime and vote Republican.

And as some workers take a closer look at Reagan and the Republican platform, they do not like what they see. "The whole Republican view on the equal rights amendment is unbelievable," said Colleen Downey, one of 600 women working at the GM plant.

But the key to the campaign will be economics, and some leaders feel that long-range trends are running in favor of the Republicans. The average worker in the Linden plant makes $20,000 a year, not counting overtime or a spouse's income, and fits squarely into the middle class.

"I think a lot of these guys have forgotten where they came from," said Joe Gentile, president of the union local. "Years ago, if you hired in here, you didn't have much going for you, and you stuck with the Democrats. Now they have things pretty good — nice homes, two cars, their kids are in college, their wives are working. And it's changed their way of thinking. I have close friends who wouldn't consider the Republicans 15 or 20 years ago, and now they can't say a bad word about them."

As incomes rise, the old union solidarity born of struggle and sacrifice begins to wane. Matthew McKenna, the local's treasurer, puts it this way: "Look at our benefits — they're fantastic. What else can we ask for? We try to remind the younger people what we went through to get them, but they don't want to hear it. That's yesterday — what are you going to do tomorrow?"

Today, members of Local 595 see their middle-class status threatened by economic conditions that deteriorated under a Democratic president, and that only aggravates their feelings against the party.

No second chance

"I voted for Carter last time but I never will again," sputtered Frank McKenna, a 41-year-old repairman with 19 years in the plant. "Anybody who takes food out of my children's mouths won't get a second chance."

This fear, and frustration, spurs out in other ways. Many workers resent Carter's decision to accept Cuban and Haitian refugees, and some agree with Deborah Koeppel, a young worker in blue jeans, when she says, "We should put them back on their boats and sink them."

"In the end, Carter will get the endorsement of the key unions," said Gray, the regional director. "But that doesn't mean he'll get the union vote."

Children's law

This is to bring to public attention the content of the Protection of Children Act, re-enacted last year under a new name — The Family and Child Services Act.

This act allows the Superintendent of Child Welfare, or staff, to apprehend children on a number of grounds. After a court hearing the child can be placed in his custody. The act does not, however, require intervention even for the most severe cases of abuse or neglect. It does not require the Ministry of Human Resources, or any other agency to provide such assistance as the parents may need to care for their children. Once a child is in custody of the Superintendent, he is not required to ensure any specified level of care (except for medical/surgical treatment) — not even the level of care that is required of parents. He is accountable to no one for the welfare of the child.

The Superintendent of Child Welfare is also the Deputy Minister of Human Resources, and has in any case always been subject to the authority of the minister. He is therefore operating under the authority of a person with many other administrative and political responsibilities which could easily conflict with the best interests of an individual child or children.

The public should be involved in this issue. They should have information. There should be debate. The welfare of our children is too important to leave total responsibility to one individual — this responsibility should be spread throughout the society. We must all share in it. — Barbara Crockford, 116 Simcoe Street.

used, surely it would be prudent to avoid possible misuse of authority by limiting it. It is, after all, the welfare of our children this ministry is responsible for — not roads or fish.

In 1975 the Royal Commission on Family and Children's Law proposed a model Children's Act. This provides the legislative framework for a more positive approach — one which would protect the child's right to proper care. This model has since been used across Canada as the basis for new legislation. Yet in B.C. the Ministry of Human Resources has responded to increasing pressure for similar legislation by introducing the same, archaic act under a new name.

Out of money

You may have been wondering why you haven't heard from the Handicapped Recreation Society for a while, or why you haven't received a July program schedule. Once again the society is out of funding. Proposals have been submitted to government but at the present time no funds have been received. Some of the adult participants have been running a raffle to raise money. The proceeds from this are a help, but we will need to receive a substantial amount of money from other sources before adult programs can get underway.

again. (Summer programs for children, teens and young adults will be operating until the end of August on federal and provincial Youth Employment grants.)

If you have any questions or concerns regarding the society and its programs, please feel free to give me a call. You will be notified as soon as we are able to offer programs again. Any suggestions you have for raising money would be greatly appreciated.

Hopefully programs will be underway again soon! — Judith Armstrong, Program Co-ordinator, Victoria Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons.

Gutsy fellow

Terry Fox, that 21-year-old individual who is running about 4,600 miles from St. John's, Newfoundland to Victoria, B.C. in order to drum up donations for the Cancer Fund, must definitely go down in the all-time annals of amazing physical achievements.

In this year of the splintered Olympic Games when many athletes are feeling cheated because of anti-Russian boycotting, here comes Terry Fox, a gutsy, dedicated human being in the marathon to beat all marathons — a truly cross-country performance which is encouraging people to donate money to help defeat as dreaded a disease as our world has known.

I certainly hope that everyone living in Canada or anywhere else for that matter, will donate as generously as possible to the Cancer Fund which Terry Fox is running for in such a determined manner. — Wickstrom, 336 Shadley Street

The key is to be flexible

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

The eleventh-hour announcement that George Bush would be Ronald Reagan's running mate for the U.S. presidency was the surprise of the Republican convention. But the edge had been taken off that surprise only two hours earlier when Mr. Bush, who had professed himself a moderate while opposing Mr. Reagan in the Republican primaries, delivered a speech that was immoderate both in style and substance.

As recently as March 26, Mr. Bush said he was "astonished" at Mr. Reagan's lack of knowledge, and warned his listeners that "Jimmy Carter is an example of what happens to the economy when an inexperienced president takes office." Yet either Mr. Reagan has, in the space of four months, acquired the wisdom of the ages, or Mr. Bush has executed a rhetorical leap that would land any other man in hospital. "Ronald Reagan," he told the delegates last Wednesday night, "is a winner. He's a winner because he's a leader; he has travelled this country and understands its people. His message is clear. His message is understood."

It wasn't understood by Mr. Bush in April. "When the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan," he said then, "Governor Reagan said he would blockade Cuba. But it wasn't Cubans who invaded. It was the Russians. We don't need any more 'reckless' statements like that." Yet weeks later, Mr. Bush is trumpeting Mr. Reagan's message with the fervor of a true believer. "Under the leadership of Ronald Reagan," he told the delegates, "Americans overseas will once again be able to count on their government to protect their safety, so that no American will ever again be humiliated by foreign fanatics. Under a Reagan presidency, a policy of peace through strength will assure that no power on earth, be it great or small, will miscalculate the resolve of the American people and its leader."

... We must stop apologizing for the United States of America around the world."

Asked earlier this year whether he would describe himself as a moderate conservative rather than a conservative moderate, Mr. Bush said, "Yes. And I'm not even sure about that." Either he was insincere then, or, preaching a gospel which he claimed frightened him mere weeks ago, he is insincere now; the confusion of principles and opportunism, in a vice-presidential candidate, is unnerving.

It's 'selective' service

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Speaking of the draft, have you ever wondered why the only branch of government that has to conscript labor is the military?

Nobody ever argues for drafting people into the State Department, or the Federal Power Commission, or the FBI. And what about the office of the president? It needs more people every year, but nobody ever says, "Let's have Selective Service send out a bunch of letters saying, 'Greetings: You are ordered to report for two years' duty at the White House.'"

And the Congress — it always needs elevator operators, doormen, people to do the piping and greet the folks from back home. Does Congress ever say, "Let's draft young Americans for these jobs?" You bet your bottom dollar it doesn't.

It's only the military jobs that excite Congress's appetite for conscript labor, and of course congressmen make a good deal of sense when they talk about why young people ought to be made to serve their country. There are good reasons for asking everybody to do a little service to the state.

It's good experience for the young. Throws them into challenging new problems, gets them out in the world where they can meet all kinds of people from all over, helps them grow and understand the complexity of the country, makes them smarter citizens who'll strengthen the political system. How can anybody who cares about the health of the country be against it?

In fact, it's such a fine way of getting young people involved in the country's problems that you wonder why it's used only to fill military jobs. A lot of people with no particular interest in maintaining war equipment might be happy to register for a draft anyhow if they knew there was a chance of being drafted for work that interested them more than warfare.

As things are now though, all they have to look forward to is the unformed bureaucracy. This takes the edge off the excitement when the mailman brings the letter from Selective Service, since there is no chance of opening it and finding that you're going to the White House, or the State Department, or the Capitol of the United States to move those famous senators up and down in those private elevators.

Right away you know you're going to be put into uniform and taught the difference between Parade Rest and The Rear March. Why is this opportunity for edifying government service limited to government service with ammunition?

One reason is that all the other jobs in which a young American can serve his country are locked up by volunteers who would be furious if they were replaced by draftees. One reason they would be furious is that most of them are earning very good salaries.

A couple of recent economic studies show that civilian government jobs paid better wages than comparable jobs in private industry. There can be a lot of satisfaction in serving your country when you realize that if you weren't serving your country you'd be eating a little lower on the hog.

In any case, once you get beyond the military, there is so much competition for government jobs that there are no jobs left over in which young Americans can enjoy the healthy benefits of serving their country.

Well, you may say, if that is the case, why not raise military salaries as high as the government's civilian salaries? Wouldn't that strain a lot of the civilian work force away from the State Department and White House and Senate elevators and leave open ings for some draftees to fill a lot of Finnbogadóttir . . . Pankhurst would be proud

Pragmatic Iceland won't rock the boat

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

Ms. Vigdís Finnbogadóttir (which means that she is the daughter of Finnborga) has won a famous victory for women and a narrow one over the Icelandic Right. She is the first female elected Head of State in Europe. Unlike Cleopatra, Queens Elizabeth I and II and Catherine II of Russia (who was manoeuvred on to the throne by her lover) Ms. Finnbogadóttir was chosen by the people. Mrs. Pankhurst would have been proud of her. She prevailed over a field of three formidable men. It included Mr. Albert Guðmundsson, who once played football for Glasgow Rangers, the Arsenal, Nantes, the Racing Club de Paris, and Nice and who has recently made a name for himself as a king-maker in Iceland's Independence Party. It was Mr. Guðmundsson's sturdy stand in February which secured the victory of Mr. Thoroddsen as prime minister over Mr. Hálgrímsson.

Ms. Finnbogadóttir, who lives alone but for an adopted daughter and is 50 and a theatre director, will be called upon in the main to preside over the formation of new governments. Iceland, at the moment, is an unhappy and tormented place with inflation running at 61 per cent per year, oil which costs the earth when supplied by the Soviet Union (but perhaps rather less if supplied by Britain) and a party system which is as Italian except for the absence of the Roman Catholic church. But the Icelanders are shrewder than most Italians. They know full well that they have only three national resources — fish, hot water, and the economic benefits which come their way from the immense and vital American airbase at Keflavik. It was common sense, more than anything else, which made them fight the cold war against Britain and it has been common sense, more than anything else, which has so far prevented them from throwing the Americans out.

It is true that Ms. Finnbogadóttir was photographed in 1961 among the leaders of an anti-Keflavik demonstration and was much concerned in 1974 in a movement to collect anti-Keflavik signatures. It is not true, on the other hand, that she has been elected because of her anti-Keflavik past. She claims to have been put in by the fishermen.

Keflavik, as most Icelanders know, is a defensive base and not an aggressive one. It exists to provide airborne detection against Soviet submarines approaching Iceland and North America from the Kola peninsula. And in spite of many murmurs, the Icelanders, who belong to NATO, tolerate it still. It is unlikely that the election of Ms. Finnbogadóttir will make much difference: glorious though it is for Mrs. Pankhurst's cause.

All experts agree that the stress of life in Israel — a small country, isolated, almost surrounded by enemies, subject to frequent wars, with overcrowded cities and a multitudinous bureaucracy — finds expression in the way Israelis drive.

What, then, has happened? Why are those cars following one another prudently in the slow lane? Why do motorists now slam to a halt to let a pedestrian use the crosswalk on Jerusalem's Jaffa Road?

'Malevolent' policewoman

There is still stress at work. But now the stress is provided by the Israeli police.

Alongside the expressway, U.S.-made Ford police cars equipped with radar monitor the speed of passing cars. Young policewomen, looking innocent in their mini-skirts but at the same time malevolent with their poised ticket books, whistle down motorists who fail to halt for pedestrians (they also collar Jaywalkers with unconcealed delight). Hidden cameras trap drivers running red lights at major intersections.

An elaborate education program has accompanied the police crackdown, but Israeli drivers admit that it is the fear of a traffic ticket that has changed them from maniacs to milquetoasts.

Driving licences are being suspended for the equivalent of two minor infractions a year. And fines, once negligible, are now sky high.

Until 1979, the maximum fine for a moving violation was $150. Now it is $2,000. A driver who runs a stop sign no longer faces a maximum $40 fine; a judge can now fine him up to $100. Two such violations can mean suspension of a driver's licence for two or three months.

Every violation carries a number of points — four for ignoring a stop sign, for example — and at six points traffic school is compulsory. At eight points, a judge can order a licence suspension.

Minister of Transport Chaim Landau launched the traffic safety campaign soon after he took over the job in January 1979. He made road safety, long a neglected matter here, one of the top priorities of his ministry, and won the cooperation of the Israeli police — who come under the Interior Ministry — and the Ministry of Education.

With a fifth as many cars per capita as the United States, Israel in 1979 had three times as many fatalities per 100,000 kilometers driven.

"Israel had the highest death toll in the world, when you consider the number of cars and kilometers driven," said an official of the National Council for Prevention of Road Accidents.

One problem was the number of new drivers, people who could not afford a car (highly taxed here) until perhaps a decade after becoming eligible to drive at age 18. At 18 men go into the army for three years, so unless they learn to drive there, they will not be able to start driving until their early 20s. Two-thirds of those who take the licence test fail the first time.

But while he will risk accident to avoid the humiliation of having a woman pass him, the Israeli driver will politely wave past him any driver who makes an importuning gesture.

In the first five months of 1980 there was a 16 per cent drop in all accidents, a 41 per cent drop in serious accidents and a 48 per cent decrease in the number of people killed. Experts say it is the decrease in speeding which has cut fatalities. And tickets have cut speeding.

"I got a ticket a month ago for $65," said Moshe, who drives a Mercedes taxi on the 35-mile Tel Aviv-Jerusalem route. "and I almost lost my licence for two months. My licence! That's my job."

"I've never been more nervous. I keep one eye on the speedometer and the other on the policeman. I'm not relaxed a bit. I think I'm getting an ulcer."

Israel cuts auto havoc

By DIAL TORGERSON

The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Israel, a country that has long been known for having the deadliest traffic in the world, has managed in the past five months to cut traffic deaths almost in half.

Visitors who know what traffic used to be like now stare amazed at Israeli motorists following one another down the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv Expressway at the 55 mile-an-hour limit, in the slow lane, driving with what seems to be prudence and caution.

A couple of years ago, before the expressway was open, Israeli drivers were literally driving each other off the road as they raced to pass on the blind curves of the old two-lane blacktop that snaked through the countryside.

Israeli drivers were famous for an aggressive driving style that bordered on the homicidal. There was a time when anyone who stopped for a pedestrian at a crosswalk could cause a block-long pileup behind him.

There were those who thought that Israeli driving, which claimed 12,700 lives in the last 30 years, was a symptom of a darker side of the Israeli personality. Dr. Philip Singer, an American medical anthropologist in Tel Aviv as a guest lecturer once said:

"I think the psychopathie, the aggressive, the hostile, the suicidal and homicidal nature of driving on Israel's roads — at least two people a day die — is really just the symptom of a society which has a great deal of trouble because of its personality."

"There's a tremendous pressure for the driver behind you to push you right up to the tail of the driver in front of you. The driving situation becomes one where you use it to work out your aggressions which you apparently can't work out anywhere else."

All experts agree that the stress of life in Israel — a small country, isolated, almost surrounded by enemies, subject to frequent wars, with overcrowded cities and a multitudinous bureaucracy — finds expression in the way Israelis drive.

CRD seeks power over hospital board

★ Business licence proposal rejected

Capital Regional District directors made it clear Wednesday they have no intention of administering business licences in electoral areas.

They rejected the recommendation made in a report by chief community planner Jim Masteron.

Instead, the local planning and zoning committee voted to recommend to Finance Minister Hugh Curtis the proposed Business Licence Act be amended so that licences will not be granted until applicants have satisfied all the zoning, building inspection, health and fire requirements of the CRD.

The committee was told the regional district lacked authority to adopt bylaws requiring persons to obtain a licence before operating a business under the current legislation.

Langford director Ed Lubick noted taking over the issuance of business licences would inevitably lead to more costs.

"Like dog control, the budget went from $30,000 to $80,000 in no time at all," he said.

Metchosin director Mac Tipton said he didn't want to see a great bureaucracy set up.

"I'm just kicking up my heels," he said. "The poor little guy is going to get shafted."

A chance to criticize bus routes

Municipal staff and residents will be allowed to respond to proposed changes in transit routes.

The Capital Regional District board agreed to this on Wednesday after Saanich Mayor Mel Couveiller said "it was just courtesy" to have dialogue before new plans are implemented. "You've got to give the citizens a chance to understand," he said.

He said his staff had comments to make about route changes but had been denied an opportunity to express them.

The directors agreed to refer to Saanich and Central Saanich councils recommendations dealing with route plans that affect their municipalities.

They include proposal for a terminus to be located in the Royal Oak area.

The Capital Regional District's hospital board voted 33 to 17 Wednesday to take away the decision-making role of the hospital and health planning commission but almost immediately found itself stymied.

The vote came after a lengthy debate during which commission chairman Charles Perkins said his group is sticking with its controversial decision to regionalize obstetrics and pediatrics service at the new Victoria General

PERKINS

Hospital on Helmcken Road.

Right after the vote, however, regional board chairman Jim Campbell told directors the hospital board could not make its move until permission is given by the provincial government because the bylaw, which set up the commission, gives it a decision-making role.

The board then voted to recommend to the commission Royal Jubilee Hospital remain open for obstetrics and pediatrics for two years after the opening of the Helmcken hospital if the government provides the funding to meet capital costs and special staff.

North Saanich alderman Harold Parratt said the board's vote to take over decision-making was not a criticism of the commission but he said elected officials should be answerable to the voters.

The hospital commission is made up of elected and non-elected persons, many of them expert in their field.

Dr. G. Scott Wallace, who has led a consistent campaign to maintain obstetrics and pediatrics at Jubilee, said he was encouraged by the board's action.

Before the vote was taken he had told directors the survey on which the commission had based its decision to regionalize obstetrics and pediatrics had been made by outside experts whose recommendations were in conflict with local physicians and residents.

Langford Lake residents get development delay

Langford Lake residents Wednesday stalled for at least nine months a proposal of Goldstream Meadows to build 56 houses at the northern end of the lake.

Spokesman for the Langford Lake Improvement District and the Langford Lake Planning Association persuaded the Capital-Regional District's local planning and zoning committee to delay action until a secondary plan is in place and additional studies have been done on groundwater movement.

Association secretary Deborah Acheson said it would be premature to allow the development to go ahead before the planning process is completed.

She said residents were considering going to sewers, wanted to improve public access to the lake, retain some wild parts as a bird sanctuary and provide access to schools.

She said the association hopes to have a plan completed in nine months and hold a public meeting in January.

Improvement district chairman Ed Marten said the application by Goldstream Meadows — a subsidiary of OK Trucking and

The Capital Regional District voted Wednesday to award a $1,318,695.95 contract to Webb and Trace Ltd. for construction of part of the View Royal sewerage system.

Webb and Trace's bid was the lowest of six received.

dent. Siles Zuazo won a plurality in the presidential election, but the election was thrown into the Congress because no candidate won a clear majority.

Siles Zuazo was reportedly in hiding and had not been heard from.

A Bolivian bishop, who also requested anonymity, said four Jesuit priests were arrested early in the military takeover, and last weekend authorities detained four more.

The bishop said four of the missing priests were Spaniards and at least one was an Italian.

Rev. Patrick Hudson of Dublin, Ireland, said 20 soldiers forced their way into the rectory at Santa Marta de los Angeles in a slum area above La Paz.

He said the soldiers ransacked the rectory while shouting obscenities but left without making any arrests. "They said they were looking for a printing press," Hudson said.

Political refugees were reported at the embassies of Venezuela, Peru, Mexico, Colombia and Ecuador, with Colombia and Peru turning away would-be refugees for lack of room.

The junta released its first official casualty reports Wednesday, but they shed little light on opponents' claims that some government foes have been murdered.

"Some members of the armed forces have lost their lives, while extremist elements have also died," an army spokesman in Oruro said.

The announcement gave no numbers of dead, but named three soldiers wounded "in clashes with extremists operating in those centers of agitation."

Many La Paz manufacturing plants remained closed Wednesday in answer to a general strike call by labor leaders who oppose the junta. But most retail businesses were open in the downtown area after the government warned that workers who failed to show up would be fired.

Industry sources said a shortage of jet fuel had developed at El Alto international airport, forcing the Bolivian flag carrier Lloyd Aereo Boliviano to suspend some flights.

The United States, most Latin American civilian governments and several Western European countries have denounced the coup.

The Bolivian ambassadors in London and Bonn announced Wednesday they would not represent the new military junta.

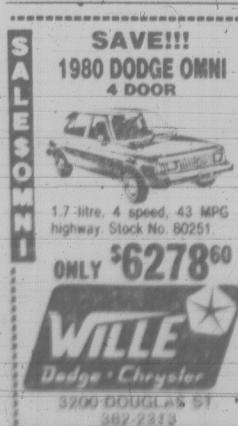

Students to perform at Belfry

Achievements in the July series of courses offered in the summer theatre project Theatrescope '80 conducted by Kaleidoscope Theatre will be shown in two public performances Saturday and Sunday at the Belfry Theatre.

The performers are students who will present A Midsummer Night's Dream, adapted and directed by Barbara Pogemiller, and Everyone Knows What a Dragon Looks Like, adapted and directed by Lorie Charters.

The performances begin at 2 p.m. each day. Admission is by donation.

Registrations for the August course are being taken by phone, 383-8124 or 383-1232.

CRTC approves pay TV

by illegal operators of as much American television as cable operators now are allowed to carry and "after a short time all illegal operations should be shut down."

The commission has rejected pay-TV in the past, most recently in 1978 when it said "it would be premature" to endorse the concept.

But pay-TV, which lets viewers pay to see first-run movies, sports and shows not carried on regular television, has become increasingly popular in the United States.

The committee says pay-TV should be approved "on condition that these new services make a significant and positive contribution to broadcasting in Canada, make effective use of Canadian resources, and that a significant amount of the revenues flow to the Canadian program-production industry."

States where cable television is not as extensive as it is in Canada.

Last fall, David Macdonald, Conservative communications minister at the time, encouraged the commission to take another look at the issue.

The committee says pay-TV should be approved "on condition that these new services make a significant and positive contribution to broadcasting in Canada, make effective use of Canadian resources, and that a significant amount of the revenues flow to the Canadian program-production industry."

While recognizing pay-TV's probable benefits, the committee says "There is no widespread, or any, forceful public demand at the moment."

The only people who demand instant introduction of pay-TV are those who expect to make profits out of it."

Canadian cable operators argued during committee hearings that pay-TV should be introduced immediately and that it be used to extend television to northern and remote communities.

Broadcasters, including the CBC, remain less convinced that pay-TV is desirable or inevitable but want control if it is introduced.

The committee also recommends that:

— the pay-TV system should not be entrusted to a single national agency because it would not be able to meet the needs of service in French and English and would not be flexible enough to meet regional and local programming needs.

— broadcasters, cable operators and other entrepreneurs are equally eligible to apply for licences.

What's politics without lots of promises? Victoria voters heard dozens of them last November but how many have the winners redeemed?

A good yardstick by which to judge politicians is the gap between promise and performance. A perusal of their pamphlets and the yellowed newspaper clippings recounting campaign speeches from last fall's municipal election has turned up some embarrassments which the candidates would rather forget.

On the other hand, the nine who have been running the city for the last seven months have performed on their promises with more than a passing grade. It may surprise the cynics, but they've done fairly well.

Mayor Bill Tindall was shrewd. He promised only a few specifics and mostly campaigned on his long record of service in elected and appointed positions.

Chinatown's preservation and construction of a convention centre are more or less on the rails but a couple of Tindall pledges related to transit haven't kept well over the months. A picture in his brochure shows the mayor behind the fence at Blanshard and Pandora overlooking the big excavation.

It "could be one of the most efficient and comprehensive transportation centres." The developer who owns this pit has announced at regular six-month intervals that a major business-commercial complex will start construction soon and local politicians and bus planners are still arguing about where a terminal should be built.

The brochure also touts Tindall's role as "moving force behind the free bus program." May it rest in peace — deceased March 31, 1980. There also hasn't been much talk lately of his "comprehensive transportation plan" which is aimed at stimulating the Victoria core by offsetting transportation costs for Victoria's citizens."

However, the mayor did endorse Ald. John Cooper's proposal this spring for a full-blown task force to study the city's transit and traffic options, and Tindall is active on the board of the Urban Transit Authority. The jury's still out on this promise.

Bob Wright is delivering in spades on his Chinatown revitalization plans, but his negative remarks on sewage treatment for Victoria also make interesting reading these days, now that he's switched right around.

(His 1977 campaign brochure is also fascinating for its comments on sewage. It shows him gazing thoughtfully over Clover Point with the headline: Our Sewage Fiasco. "Was all this really necessary? Protect your interests on the Capital Regional Board... Stop poor planning of sewage facilities.")

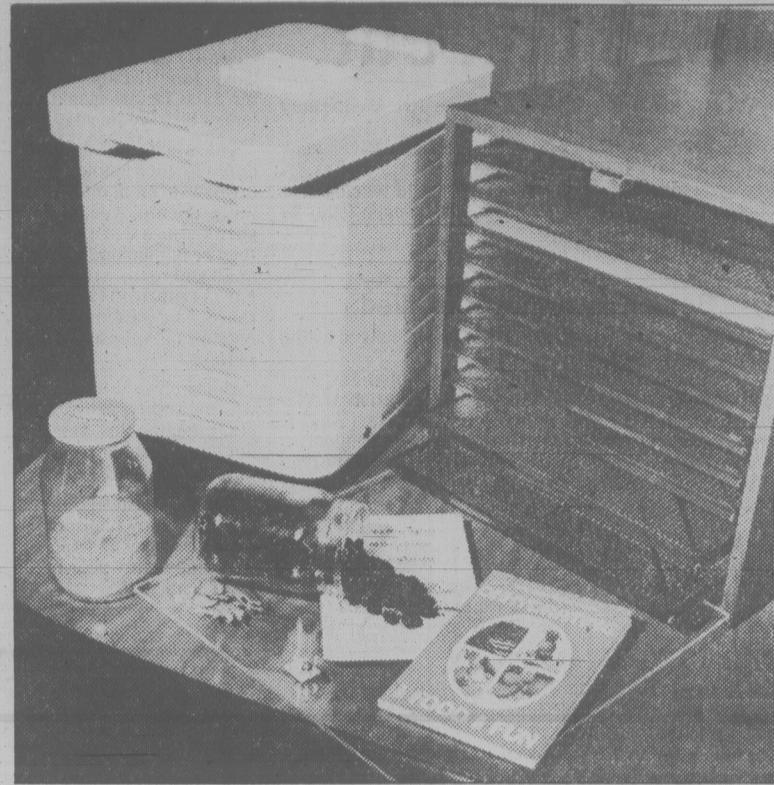

I guess former CRD chairman Murray Glazier just took him at his word and gave him the solid waste management task, an unwelcome job everyone perceived as a shaft from a disliked political rival. Wright's brave band is better known in political circles by its unofficial title, an earthy four-letter descriptive prefix.

Personal and political ironies aside, Wright is the guy for the job. Maybe he's the living illustration that campaign promises weren't meant to be taken too seriously, luckily for the voters and taxpayers.

More promises next week.

Stocking up against uncertainty

By AB KENT

Storing food against an uncertain future is becoming more widespread in Victoria.

Jessie Hall, of Hall's Food for Storage, takes orders for dehydrated foodstuffs on behalf of a Vancouver supplier, Liahona Marketing Ltd. Sales have been largely to members of the Mormon Church, which advocates self-sufficiency and food-stocking.

But lately there have been as many food orders from the general public as church members, Hall said, and the public sector is still growing.

"When volcanoes erupt, and things like that happen, you get more orders.

"People think, 'oh boy, I won't get caught,'" she said.

So they start to lay in supplies of basic commodities like flour, vegetables, fruits, milk, cheese, soup, eggs — all dehydrated and vacuum-packed with nitrogen in gallon-size tins.

Hall said the growing market could support a full-time dehydrated food business in Victoria if she could devote enough time to it. Her price list covers about 50 items, including sweet or sour cream powders, protein supplement, nuts, shortening and butter powders, peanut butter, soybean-based meat substitutes, unflavored gelatin and bacon bits.

The sealed, number 10 tins range from around $8 to $18.25 each, and for $695 per adult a family could lay in a 12-month stock.

Ted and Lorraine Strang of Victoria have their own supply of stored foods but also act as organizers of co-operative bulk buying of grains and food for drying, and sell dehydrators and grain mills in their part-time business called The Grinder.

Their garage contains 4,000 pounds of wheat, of which 20 bushels is for their own consumption to make a variety of custom flours for their bread-baking needs.

People who grind their own grain do it partly for self-sufficiency and economy, but also for better tasting, more nutritious bread without added preservatives.

Howard Biddulph, stake president of the Mormon Church here, said the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints makes no endorsement of dehydrated food, but it does advocate storage of a year's supply of non-perishables and preserved foods. The church does not take part in mass purchasing.

But it holds popular public seminars on food storage methods like vegetable and fruit drying. The philosophy is based on a Mormon doctrine of self-sufficiency and preparation for members in economic difficulty.

He said during and after the Second World War the Mormon Church was a main source of emergency relief through a well organized system of welfare storage and distribution, mainly clothing, bedding and medical supplies.

"Every individual should have a degree of self-sufficiency, like having his own garden," Biddulph said.

During the Second World War people who stored food, particularly items in short supply, were called hoarders and were not generally admired.

"We don't believe in hoarding," Biddulph said. "In times of crisis we believe we should share."

Meanwhile the church promotes self-reliance in other ways, by counselling, developing job skills and in some cases finding work for members in economic difficulty.

He said during and after the Second World War the Mormon Church was a main source of emergency relief through a well organized system of welfare storage and distribution, mainly clothing, bedding and medical supplies.

"Primarily for its church members in need, the system is also available for relief wherever needed, such as last year's Guatemala earthquake."

The system is organized on a regional basis, with Calgary serving all of western Canada. Plans are to have another storage facility in Vancouver, including foodstuffs.

No change with police

The limited strike by Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt policemen continues with no talks scheduled.

The mayors involved said earlier this week that the situation is not healthy and they were considering the options that were available.

However, no details were given, no action has been taken and the policemen continue, as they have since June 9, wearing civilian clothes to work and refusing to do certain paperwork.

Bob Almgren, who had been involved as a mediator in the dispute, was tied up earlier in the week with the construction industry negotiations.

Union spokesman John Langley said the move would prevent a possible lockout Friday by the three major breweries.

But Heinrich said he has no intention of jumping in prior to the lockout deadline.

"I don't think that we

Minister won't move to avert beer cutoff

... pass the lemon juice

Langley said no new moves are planned before Friday in the deadlocked talks, raising the prospect of a beer drought almost immediately.

Negotiators for Molson, Labatt and Carling-O'Keefe breweries gave the union until midnight Friday to accept their final offer or face a lockout.

The companies are offering a $1-an-hour increase in each year of a three-year contract, while the union is pushing for a $1.05 increase in each of two years.

The current rate for workers on the bottling line is $10.10 an hour.

But Langley said the main stumbling block is union security.

"They want a revolving-door type of arrangement, so you build up a big pool of people working at low rates without job security," Langley said.

He said the union is filing an unfair labor practice complaint with the Labor Relations Board over the companies' insistence that temporaries — who are not union members but are represented by the union in bargaining — get no increase.

He said the union's 1978 agreement with the breweries gave the 150 temporaries or permit holders a 60-cent-an-hour increase in 1978, but nothing in 1979. The new contract proposal would give nothing in the next three years and Langley said he believes the companies could use lower-paid temporaries to undermine the union.

Drop-in for dropouts

A former confectionery and newsstand will become a drop-in centre for dropouts in Greater Victoria School District for the month of August.

Counsellor Wally Dilay will make the downtown storefront at 614 Yates — formerly Tunnel News — a focal point for youngsters who have left the school system but who may want counselling on their future direction, whether it is more education or a job.

Taking the school system into the street is a move aimed at reaching youngsters turned off by the conventional classroom experience.

The storefront will have a telephone for answering queries of youngsters who don't want to appear in person.

But to make the service fully accessible a counsellor will cruise the streets at appropriate times using an Easter Seal van with the seats replaced by lounge furniture to encourage dropouts to talk about their problems.

The pilot project of School District 61 has the support of downtown businessmen, who have been concerned lately about street children, police department youth workers, and the Boys and Girls Clubs of Victoria.

It will be assessed at the end of the project before school reopens in September.

If successful the arrangement could become a forerunner of new educational techniques being explored by the district, Camosun College and the University of Victoria.

Opinion shift on centre at hearing

By NORMAN GIDNEY

More than 100 Victorians turned out Wednesday night at a rezoning hearing to rehash the merits and disadvantages of a government-subsidized convention centre on the Inner Harbor.

There were few new arguments trotted out but the evening demonstrated an apparent shift in public opinion in favor of the $8 million project.

When city council first attempted to rezone the property two months ago, speakers from the crowd of 200 who said they opposed the project outnumbered the supporters 2-1.

But on Wednesday night it was closer to an even split.

Thirty-eight people told Mayor Bill Tindall and council what they thought of the project during the 1½-hour session.

Twenty-one of them were against and 17 supported the convention centre on the waterfront site at Wharf and Fort.

Most observers at the hearing expected a rerun of the May 21 rezoning hearing, but what surprised many was the presence of a mostly new crowd of supporters.

Only a few of the speakers in favor were holdovers from the last round of debate, while half of the opponents were from the same persistent group that has constituted the main opposition for several months.

Former Saanich alderman Edith Gunnin led off the evening, saying that a waterfront site was essential. It may be the key-factor in an organization's decision to choose Victoria for a convention.

Architect Bob Siddall also spoke of the importance of location.

"When we go to Chicago (for a convention) we go down to the basement for three days, which is why conventions won't go to Chicago and will come to Victoria."

Opponents pleaded that the harbor must be kept open as a park for the citizens of Victoria, not reserved for convention-goers only. They also said the Reid site is wrong because it will seriously aggravate traffic congestion on Wharf Street.

Betty Gibbons, 933 Convent Place, said she wasn't opposed to a convention centre as such "but I oppose the current trend towards desecrating the Inner Harbor."

"As we are told, conventions are good for business, let business build it."

The same theme was taken up by several people in business in Victoria.

Property manager Hugh Creighton, who said his offices at 1208 Wharf next to the Reid site, told the audience he spoke for no vested interest group except the Society to Protect the Endangered Taxpayers.

The arrests were made later by Saanich police.

Refunds ordered

Strand Holidays (Canada) Ltd. of Toronto must pay 23 customers $200 apiece in compensation, the B.C. consumer and corporate affairs ministry has ruled.

The ministry said the customers travelled on the cruise ship Delphi in October, but claimed the cruise was not the luxury quality they had been led to expect, and that some of the elements of the cruise advertised by the company were not available.

Strand Holidays, whose parent company is American, has one B.C. office in Vancouver.

Two men were to be charged in provincial court today with robbing an Esquimalt serviceman early Wednesday.

Police said a 25-year-old serviceman was walking in the 1000-block Dunsmuir shortly before 3 a.m. when two men threatened him and demanded his wallet.

The arrests were made later by Saanich police.

CLEAN WHITE LINES of a very famous touring roadster turned heads in Victoria this week. On second look it's not a 34-year-old Mercedes SSK, but a stylized replica Series 3 Excalibur handmade on a Chevy Corvette chassis and motor by the Milwaukee builder Brooks Stevens. Buyer Gene Handly and wife Alva, visiting from Ft. Worth, Tex., paid $40,000 (U.S.) for car, including air conditioning and roll-up side windows. He's considering buying another when he gets home.

b.c. briefsFort St. James road link cut

VANDERHOOF (CP) — A bridge fire Wednesday cut road connection to Fort St. James.

The bridge, which crosses the Nechako River near Vanderhoof, links Highway 27 to Fort St. James. A highways spokesman said the bridge would be closed to vehicles until further notice, but might be open today to foot traffic later tonight.

Cause of the fire was not known.

Senior forestry posts filled

Two senior appointments have been announced by the ministry of forests.

A.C. (Al) MacPherson has been appointed assistant deputy minister of timber, range and recreation at Victoria headquarters of the ministry and will start Aug. 1. He was regional manager for Vancouver forest region.

Charles M. Johnson has been appointed director of the ministry's silviculture branch in Victoria and will start Aug. 5. He was forestry manager at Vancouver region.

State troopers seize fishboats

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Four Canadian fishing boats were seized Wednesday morning in Portland Canal north of here by the fish and wildlife protection branch of the Alaska State Troopers.

Three of the four gillnetters are owned by fishermen from nearby Kinkolith, B.C., who fish for the B.C. Packers cannery in Prince Rupert. The fourth is owned by Neville Grebille of Vancouver.

The boats have been towed to Ketchikan, Alaska, where their owners are to be arraigned this morning.

The international fishing boundary runs along the centre of Portland Canal.

Storm-damaged lines repaired

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — B.C. Hydro crews worked through the night to repair an estimated $15,000 damage to power lines after a gale-force thunderstorm hit some areas of the city and surrounding areas Tuesday.

The worst hit area was west of the city and most of the damage was caused by trees falling on conductors and power lines, B.C. Hydro line supervisor Lloyd Hill said Wednesday.

Vanderhoof RCMP said Wednesday they did not have any damage reports but power was out in the town for about an hour.

Drowning victim identified

NANAIMO (CP) — The body of a 25-year-old man who died while swimming near White Rapids was identified Wednesday as Robert Dean Campbell of nearby Protection Island.

Campbell was swimming in a natural pool above the Nanaimo River rapids Monday when swept away by the current.

Eric Erickson, 18, of Nanaimo, died July 8 in the same rapids. A rope was placed across the river after the accident. Campbell tried pulling himself to safety with the rope but currents were too strong, police said.

Smuggled cocaine kills man

VANCOUVER (CP) — Russell Anthony Hobbs, 21, of suburban Coquitlam, died in hospital Sunday after a condom containing cocaine broke inside his body, Richmond coroner Dr. Richard Talmey said Wednesday.

The Richmond coroner said Hobbs died of cerebral anoxia, which is damage to the brain.

He said evidence of cocaine was found in the dead man's urine and authorities believe three packs of the drug had been inserted into his body, one of which ruptured.

Police said Hobbs arrived at Vancouver International Airport Sunday on a flight from Lima, Peru, and was observed at Canadian customs to be in a state of disorientation. He later collapsed and died in hospital.

RCMP said 38 grams of cocaine were seized.

Just 26 from plant jobless

Jobs have been found for all but 26 of the 410 men and women seeking work since Ocean Falls Corp. shut down June 1, Labor Minister Jack Heinrich told the legislature Wednesday.

There are an additional dozen former employees of the newsprint plant who remain unemployed, but "I think in all fairness, they're not looking to move at all and really are looking for (financial) assistance," he said during debate on his ministry's estimates.

Heinrich said tradesmen were quickly rehired by other companies but production workers are having problems finding work.

Heinrich also said he expects lower production losses because of strikes in 1980 than in any year in the last decade.

New municipal focus urged

Municipalities must spend more time on energy-saving measures and less on the machinations of rezoning, says Hal Knight, president of the Saanich Greenbelt Association.

Energy conservation and environmental concerns are issues that can no longer be put on the back burner, Knight says.

He believes federal government pursestrings would be loosened if municipalities showed more interest.

Knight has been pressuring aldermen to show some leadership and was recently when they instructed municipal officials to look into energy saving.

Says Knight: "The basic thing is that all municipalities should have a policy on what we should do. If municipalities showed some interest I'm sure there are federal funds available."

He said he has little faith in provincial government leadership in this matter.

One of the energy-saving moves he has suggested to council is double-glazing of all windows at the municipal hall.

He's also concerned about the possible loss of productivity caused by the use of fluorescent lights in large buildings.

"All public buildings are mass-lit (with all areas illuminated at all times) and it hasn't reduced the cost at all," he said. "There is significant evidence of loss of productivity. If you are under fluorescent lights for any length of time you don't feel very well . . . you work at a slower pace."

"With fluorescent lights you have the glare, the flickering as they get old and, when they are old, the ends of the tubes have this radiation."

Incandescent lighting used in homes is less harmful and the heat it radiates could be utilized, Knight said.

"We will have to prove there's a great cost benefit.

When the Hartland Road

dump is forced to close down and we have to relocate, the costs are going to be enormous. A good recycling program could forestall those costs."

While sewage disposal is a Capital Regional District responsibility, Knight said individual municipalities should be concerned about pollution of local beaches.

"The U.S. Congress has passed legislation that will ban the dumping of raw sewage into the Atlantic and Pacific by 1981 and allow no more landfills after 1985. How long do you think we can dump raw sewage into their backyard?" he asked.

Knight said politicians should be looking for more permanent solutions, such as converting sewage into fertilizer.

"I use that kind of fertilizer but it comes from the U.S.," he said.

House destroyed

A house that had just been completely remodeled was destroyed in a fire early this morning in Metchosin.

The house at 4849 Rocky Point Road, owned by Mike Lukow, was out of control when the Metchosin fire department arrived shortly after 4 a.m.

Initial estimates place damage at $60,000.

A fire department spokesman said it is not known how the fire started although a number of paint cans were stored in the house. An explosion was heard just before the fire started.

The family was sleeping next door at the time because the house had just been painted and was filled with fumes.

Bridge is not played in a vacuum. The theoretical must inevitably give way to the practical. Many decisions a declarer makes are based on his opponents' bids and plays and are not founded solely on the 26 cards he sees before him.

He presumes that the opponents are trying to win, and that all their bids and plays are geared to that goal. This does not mean that they are incapable of error; it means only that they are not deliberately trying to lose.

South won the spade lead with the king and could count eight sure tricks. There were three chances for a ninth trick — the hearts could be divided 3-3; the clubs could be divided 3-3; the diamond finesse, if attempted, would succeed.

There were two ways of playing the hand. Declarer could test the hearts and clubs, and, if neither suit broke evenly, fall back on a

Before the judge

Three persons were fined $1,000 each Wednesday in Victoria provincial court for having more than the legal limit of sport-caught abalone.

Judge Lorne Pearce found Sandra Lee Taylor, 31, Taras Cwyk, 32, and David Kirby, 34, all of 2436 Whidbey Lane, Sidney, guilty of violating the Pacific Fisheries regulation.

The trio was charged after fisheries officers approached a five-metre speedboat near Sidney Island Feb. 7 and confiscated a total of 106 abalone.

Under questioning by Crown counsel Harold Turnham during the trial, marine biologist Al Gould testified that it took 10 to 15 years to grow the shellfish to the minimum legal size limit of 10 centimetres (four inches).

Testimony was also heard that a commercial fisherman approached the trio Jan. 24 and spoke to them about catching abalone.

alone in a restricted, or closed, area. As they sped off, court was informed, the fisherman saw three sacks of abalone thrown overboard. He dove down, retrieved the sacks, and freed the shellfish.

"It is my view that courts, in some instances, have taken a far too lenient view," Pearce said before imposing the fines.

Earlier this month, 49-year-old Raymond Eric Linden and 36-year-old Sidney Roger Norman Howard, both of 1010 McKenzie, were fined a total of $800 each by Judge William Ostler for offering sport-caught abalone for sale, possession of undersized abalone, and having more than the legal daily limit.

They had 210 abalone, 25 of which was under the legal size.

In that case, Ostler described the offence as "a gross overcatch."

Judge Blake Allan denied bail to a 53-year-old man charged with theft under $200 and possession of stolen property.

Norman Joseph Giroux, 521 Johnson, was arrested in connection with an incident Tuesday afternoon in which a man, passed out from drinking at Wharf and Yates, had his watch taken and pockets rummaged.

Following a bail hearing, Giroux was remanded in custody until next Wednesday for plea.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were Charles Alexander Watson, 40, of 640 Broadway, $400; Gerald Wayne Gould, 34, of 1009 McKenzie, $400; Joyce Nicole Shannon, 37, of 908 Lyall, $400; Vyrna May Martin, 37, of 942 Preston Way, $350; Gordon Richard Chapman, 35, of 724 Sea Terrace, $300, and Bette Jean Quirico, 41, of 2625 Selwyn, $250.

Survives burn torture, intern gets $390,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — A young medical intern who sought damages to compensate for "the destruction of his career and his body" was awarded $390,000 Wednesday in B.C. Supreme Court.

Justice D.E. Andrews lauded Dr. Robert Paul Kraus, 26, for overcoming the trauma of terrible facial burns and the partial loss of an arm to pursue a career as a psychiatrist.

Kraus was six weeks from completing his internship at St. Paul's Hospital when severely burned in an automobile accident. Kraus was a passenger in a car which overturned and burned in April, 1978, said Andrews, adding that the intern driving the vehicle was totally at fault.

The judge said Kraus was severely burned in the upper half of his body and no longer has the manual dexterity to enter his chosen field of plastic surgery.

He said Kraus was able to convey the agony he suffered in the burn unit at Vancouver General Hospital.

"The pain he suffered amounted to torture," said Andrews. "I believe him when he says he seriously considered suicide."

Kraus was released from the unit after 17 months "thoroughly depressed, frightened at the prospect of facing the public, frustrated, resentful and wondering what he was to do."

Andrews said Kraus, although unable to practise surgery, has decided to practise psychiatry.

Real Facts:

About Chrysler gas economy.

Fuel efficient cars? You don't have to wait for next year's models. Chrysler has them now! Every one of our standard models is rated 23 MPG or better. (That's 12.5L per 100 km.) Chrysler's gas economy leaders are 4-cylinder, front-wheel drive Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon at a remarkable 36 MPG

(or 7.8L per 100 km) according to the real facts published by Transport Canada. There isn't another car designed and built in North America that's easier on gas. And that's regular gas. Yes, Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon are made even more economical by operating on regular gas!

36 MPG

About Chrysler prices.

Whoever said you had to pay a big price to get an economical, fuel efficient car, hadn't compared Chrysler's price for Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon. Compare with comparably equipped VW Rabbit and Honda Accord. Besides the fact that we believe Omni and Horizon are more beautifully styled and finished, you'll discover they're more attractively priced too. Why pay more?

About Chrysler roominess.

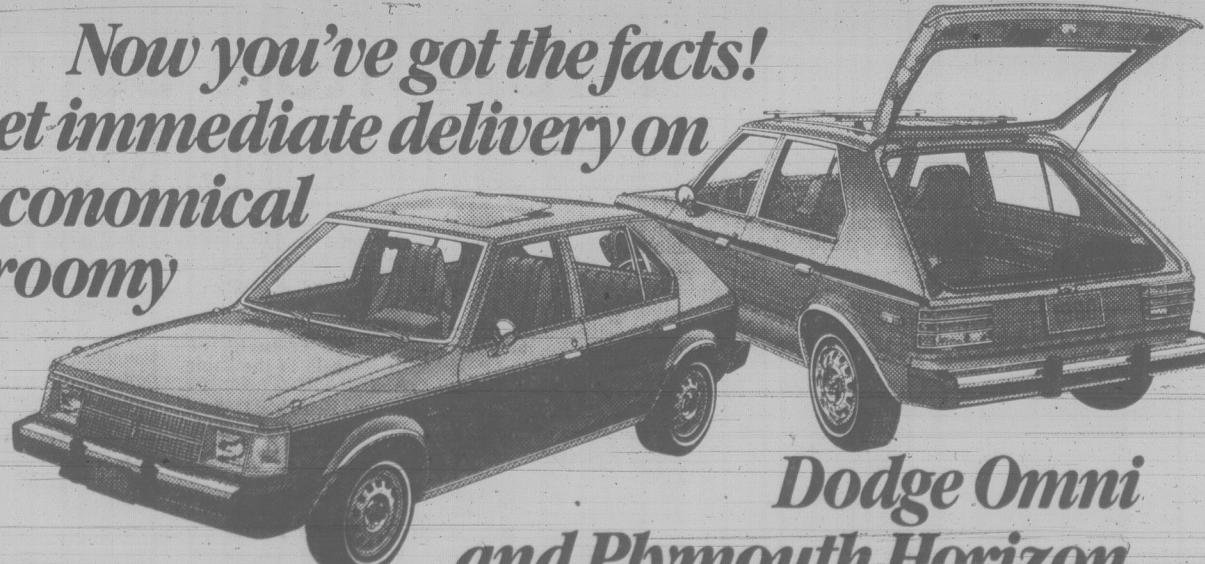

Just because you want a car that's more efficiently sized, doesn't mean you have to settle for driving around all cramped and uncomfortable. Front-wheel drive Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon have been designed to give you maximum roominess and comfort in a car that takes up minimum space on the road. The engine has even been transverse mounted for every bit of available legroom. Compare Omni and Horizon with Chevette and Acadian. You can't dispute the real facts, and the real facts say Omni and Horizon are more comfortably roomy!

ROY SMITH: second in Winston West (See Max Low)

max low

Racing no money maker but travel, driving fun

It's 35 years since Roy Smith, who hadn't even reached his first birthday, came from the little town of Oliver to Victoria.

And he'll tell you with a certain amount of delight and even pride in his voice that he has lived in Gordon Head for 30 years.

During almost the last three of those years, however, the professional race car driver hasn't done much actual "living" in this area at all. He's on the road most of the time towing his car from track to track competing in the gruelling NASCAR Winston West series that begins at Riverside, California, in January and ends in Phoenix, Arizona, at the end of November.

I caught Roy in the 29-degree heat Monday between practice drives in his bright orange J.R. Edgett Camaro around the Western Speedway track and he said it felt good to be home.

He was here to compete in the Speedweek North-west superstock series Tuesday night. Didn't do too badly, either, even though he wasn't one of the trophy winners. He was one of the five fastest drivers who all cracked the old track record, placed second in the "A" trophy dash and was fifth out of 21 in the 75-lap main event.

Along with the other visiting drivers, Roy will be in action in this series again at Western tonight but this week will be his only driving appearance in Victoria this year.

Next stop is Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Washington, for the last race in what is a fill-in series for him and then it's back to the regular NASCAR grind.

Life wasn't always like this for Roy Smith. For the first 12 years or so of his career he stuck to driving Sprint cars around here for Vantreight Farms. He switched to stock cars and the much more competitive NASCAR circuit just over two and a half years ago and, despite all the travelling, he enjoys it.

"There's more money in NASCAR and much bigger race tracks," he explains, "and if you go down there and you beat them, you really feel you've done something."

He knows the wandering life is hard on his Gordon Head-based wife Diana and sons Gary, aged 11, and four-year-old Erin. Diana does travel to see him drive in some of the summer-time meets, he says, but most of the time she's here and he's somewhere far away.

"For a while I used to feel 'Hey, this is great' because you come home and everyone is so thrilled to see you," he explains. "You don't seem to fight as much as other couples and I thought, with so many others I know breaking up specially the guys around my age, that this kind of life was the answer."

"But I know now that it bothers Diana more than it does me."

Even when he's in Victoria Roy isn't home — he's working out in the Sidney shop of his crew chief Harvey Chipper with the rest of his team, Dave Smith (no relation), Rick Bony and Duncan Lamb.

"So either way, Diana and I see very little of each other," he points out.

And if you think there's big prize money to be earned off in auto racing, you're dead wrong. All the winner picks up at a meet like this week's at Western is around $4,000, says Roy.

"No, it's definitely not worth all the expenses involved taking your car and crew around from track to track," he admits. "More than 90 per cent of the drivers — even those like Richard Petty — won't make money. Oh, they'll win maybe $400,000 in a year but they'll spend more than that."

"It's not worth it, except when say STP or someone comes in and says 'here's a couple of hundred thousand bucks, put my name on your car.' That's how they really make the money, not from the racing."

Right now, race-wise, things are going well for Roy Smith. He's in second place (behind Jim Robinson of Salmo, California) in the Winston West series and could end up taking first place and the prize money that goes with it when it all winds up in November.

But at 36, how much longer can he keep going?

"Well, many of the top drivers are older than I am," he says, pointing out that Petty is 42. "Hersch McGriff, who'll be competing Sunday at Evergreen, is still a damn fine driver and he's over 50!"

And Roy grins and looks out fondly over the track and that gives him away.

You can tell, one day it's going to be a hard thing to give up.

The real champs show up

By BILL WALKER

It was a battle of champions, but not for long, at Memorial Arena Wednesday.

The Canadian champion Victoria Shamrocks left the recently-crowned World champion Coquitlam Adanacs in complete disarray before this Western Lacrosse Association game was over.

The real champions showed up as the 1979 Mann Cup winners and destroyed the Adanacs 12-5 on a memorable night for several reasons.

It put the Rocks in a first-place tie with the Adanacs. And if the Irish can win their final two games of the season, they will finish on top as they have a better goals for-and-against record against the A's on the season.

In so doing, the Shamrocks turned in their finest home defensive display of the year, bar none, while goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer put on a brilliant display.

He was the final rock on which the Adanacs founders. Of the five goals scored on Smeltzer, two were in an empty net as the Rocks got crossed up twice trying to use an extra attacker on the floor. He stopped 50 shots.

It was also Ranjit Dillon night. The popular veteran of 14 years with the Shamrocks was honored by having his No. 5 sweater retired and was the recipient of several gifts.

And the evening also showed the Adanacs, often thought to be the most disciplined club in the WLA, could be had.

The game, which was rough from the beginning, often bitter, and featured one fight, ended in a classless fit of pique by Dave Cochrane of the visitors.

With the game almost over and Coquitlam hopelessly out of it, Cochrane got called for slashing Kevin Alexander of the Rocks and followed by cross-checking Alexander to the floor, falling on him and then stepping on Alexander's back on the way to the penalty box.

The incident almost precipitated a break-out by the fans who crowded around the penalty box yelling "out... out... out". But cooler heads fortunately prevailed.

Cochrane was handed a match penalty which means an automatic suspension until the incident is reviewed by commissioner Wally Donaldson.

In the one-on-one confrontation, Paul Michael of the Irish was matched with Gord Quilty of the A's. There was no decision.

Alexander and Jim Lynch, the league's one-two scoring leaders, showed why as the Rocks led 3-2 after one period and 8-4 after two.

Alexander had four goals and three assists and Lynch two goals and four assists. Only the fact that WLA rules dictate that one team receive at least one game star vote did Lynch fail to be honored. Smeltzer and Alexander were one, two and goalie Greg Thomas of Coquitlam No. 3 in the voting.

Other Shamrock scorers were Tej Labh with two, Jim Boyd, Chris Hall, Scott Browning and Michael Boyd also had three assists.

Scoring for the A's, who were without two of their better players, Frank Nielsen and Dan Wilson, were Jim Aitchison, Gary Lindsay, Cochrane, Quilty and Randy Bryan.

Olympic fall for Nadia

Budgets win then stumble

MOSCOW (CP) — A year-old injury came back to haunt Nadia Comaneci Wednesday and jeopardized the 18-year-old Romanian gymnast's chances of repeating her Olympic triumphs of the last Games.

A winner of three gold medals, one silver and one bronze at Montreal in 1976, Comaneci had to drop out of the 1979 world championships when an abscess on her left hand required surgery.

She was back on the floor this week, performing brilliantly Monday in the compulsory phase of the Olympic team competition, in which she shared the individual lead with Natalia Shaposhnikova of the Soviet Union and scored a perfect 10 in her specialty, the balance beam.

In Wednesday's free exercises Comaneci led the field with three of her four routines completed. Then her left hand lost its grip on the uneven bars and she tumbled to the mat.

Marked down to 9.50 for the mishap, she fell to fourth place individually and Romania settled for a silver medal behind the Soviet team. Spectators wondered what effect the accident would have on Comaneci's confidence in tonight's all-round final and Friday's contests in the four gymnastic disciplines.

The gymnastic victory was one of seven for the Russians Wednesday, boosting their total of gold medals to 17 in 34 events.

Second-place East Germany had six and the remainder were shared by seven different countries.

Four more world records fell during the day, for a total of 14 since the Games started last Sunday.

Ricci Reinisch kept alive the East German swimming team's streak of breaking one every day by lowering her mark in the 100-metre backstroke for the second time, bringing it down to one minute 0.86 seconds from the 1:01.50 she swam in Thursday's heats.

Bulgarian weightlifter Yanki Rousseen improved his own records to 195 kilograms in the jerk and 342.5 over-all in the 67.5-kilo class and Soviet marksman Viktor Vlasov scored 1,173 points, one better than the former mark of Bulgarian Nonka Matova, in the smallbore rifle, three-position event.

Soviet swimmers finally ended the run of East German victories in women's competition when Lina Kachushite headed a sweep of the medals in the 200-metre breaststroke. The time of 2:29.54 was a Games record but more than a second off Kachushite's world mark.

Par Arvidsson, a badly beaten semi-finalist at the Montreal Games, out-dueled East German veteran Roger Pytel to give Sweden its second gold medal of the Games in the men's 100 butterfly. The times were 54.92 for Arvidsson and 54.94 for Pytel.

James Sykes made it look so easy.

Whitecaps, Forest draw

Vancouver Whitecaps and Nottingham Forest played to a 1-1 draw in an international exhibition soccer game at Empire Stadium Wednesday night.

John McGovern gave the two-time European Cup champions an early 1-0 edge before a record 28,710 fans and the Caps drew even when striker Trevor Whymark headed in a free kick in the final minute of the opening half.

In regular NASL play, Fort Lauderdale Strikers shut out New England Tea Men 3-0, New York Cosmos blasted San Diego Sockers 5-0, Dallas Tornado 2-0, Edmonton Drillers beat Philadelphia Fury 4-2, Washington Diplomats shaded Tampa Bay Rowdies 2-1, Chicago Sting beat Detroit Express 2-1 and Los Angeles Aztecs defeated Minnesota Kicks 3-1.

The three-year veteran of Calgary Stampeders' offensive backfield piled up 200 yards, 194 of them on the ground, and picked up three touchdowns to spark Calgary's 40-24 Canadian Football League win over Saskatchewan Roughriders on Wednesday.

In the only other game, Gerry Organ was two-for-two on field goals in Toronto, one a 40-yarder with less than two minutes remaining in the game, to put the finishing touches on Ottawa Rough Riders' 20-16 victory over previously unbeaten Argonauts.

Coming on top of his 200-yard-plus performance a gainst M. Alouettes, Sykes appears headed for another 1,000-yard season — just like his rookie year of 1978.

"I had two or three holes I could pick," said Sykes. "I just went to the one I could get to the quickest."

Sykes's second efforts added yards to many rushes but he praised the offensive line for opening up the holes that sprung him free.

"When you had that many options you knew somebody was doing something good up front."

Organ's first field goal at 2:25 of the second quarter moved him into a third-place tie for career points (971) with retired Tommy Joe Coffey.

Lawson takes seniors title

Joan Lawson of Uplands recaptured the British Columbia senior women's golf championship by one stroke Wednesday at Victoria Golf Club.

Lawson, bothered a little by the windy weather, carded an 11-over-par 85 to wrap up the honors with a 54-hole total of 252.

Lorraine MacKenzie of Vancouver's Marine Drive fired an 83 to beat Lawson for the second straight day but couldn't erase the eight-stroke lead the Uplands' team will represent the province at the Canadian championship Aug. 26 to 29 at Sydney, N.S.

In third place was Anna-May Taylor of Vancouver who shot 89 for 253.

Maureen Hibberd of Uplands and Frances Hansen of Kamloops tied for fourth place at 262 and will play off Aug. 6 at Richmond to determine which golfer gets the fourth and final berth on the B.C. team. Both women shot 87.

The team will represent the province at the Canadian championship Aug. 26 to 29 at Sydney, N.S.

Lawson, who last earned the title in 1977, has been on the B.C. team every year since the inter-provincial tournament started in 1970.

Edythe McCormick of Royal Colwood captured laurels with a 222 while Violette Maldowan of Richmond was runner-up at 224 and Florence Chapman of Royal Colwood third at 225.

International stars of soccer and automobile racing are in town for competitions tonight and, as well, Greater Victoria fans have a large number of baseball and softball games to choose from, plus harness racing.

For the stay-at-homes, there is soccer on television.

The international soccer is at Royal Athletic Park at 7 when the Lower Island Under-16 Selects take on an Australian youth team.

American and Canadian drivers will compete in auto racing at Western Speedway where the second leg of the Speedweek Northwest open superstock series starts with time trials at 7.

Harness racing continues at Sandoval Raceway with first post at 5:30.

Baseball fans have the choice of taking in the B.C.

Senior Babe Ruth championships with games at 3 and 6 at Lambrick Park or 7 at Heywood Avenue Park; Coast Projects take on Rebels and Triafalgar Legion meets the Saints in the Macdonald Park Men's League; in the Victoria-Saanich Women's League, Butler Brothers take on New York, New York and Bemister's Welding play McDonald Furniture at Hyacinth Park; and in the Lower Island Softball Association-intermediate "B" league, it's Safeway against Rawlings at Topaz Park.

Television

There's pro North American Soccer League action on Channel 11 at 8 when Seattle Sounders take on Toronto Blizzard.

Chattanooga still in turmoil

Bet your sweet Celsius Willie had a fever . . .

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — When doctors first tried to take Willie Jones' temperature, it rocketed off the scale. Hospital personnel called him "The Human Torch." Now Jones is recovering from heat stroke — and a 47° Celsius-fever (116.6° Fahrenheit) believed to be the highest anyone has ever survived.

It was a sizzling July 10, the height of this region's heat wave, when neighbors found Jones, 51, in the closed-up apartment where he lived alone.

On Wednesday, less than two weeks later, he was out of the intensive-care unit and recuperating.

When Jones arrived at the hospital's emergency room, he was immediately packed in ice and taken to an intensive-care unit. Later doctors pumped ice water in and out of a tube inserted through his nose and into his stomach.

Jones's temperature dropped to 38° in two hours, but it wasn't until several days later that it became apparent he would survive.

The patient's liver suffered heat injury but might regenerate the damaged tissue. The extent of brain damage was not known.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI) — Young blacks, including some seven-year-old children, tossed firebombs and rocks in the streets while police and firemen early today tried to quell turmoil caused by the acquittal of two Ku Klux Klansmen charged with shooting four black women.

Police officials, weary from a second night of putting down hotspots of trouble, said they would ask for a curfew in the Tennessee-Georgia border town of 170,000 people.

Mobs of jeering, angry blacks confronted police and firemen on several fronts Wednesday night and an estimated 50 firebombing calls were answered. One fire chief reported he was fired upon when answering calls.

Authorities said nine businesses and homes were burned and four persons were arrested in the disturbances, which began before dawn.

No injuries were reported.

The violence spread early today from the Alton Park area to east and southern parts of the city and spilled into the central business district.

Firemen worked feverishly to extinguish a firebombing at a manufacturing plant that had a large supply of lumber, a restaurant, a glass company and a photo supply center. Fires also were reported at a black housing project.

Riot-equipped police confronted a group of about 150 blacks marching from a housing project toward a business area in the Alton Park section.

Later, smaller groups roamed the area, tossing bottles and bricks when police were out of sight, then clapping and yelling insults as officers came near.

One band of about 25 contained some children who appeared no more than seven or eight years old.

Violence first broke out Tuesday night, hours after an all-white jury acquitted two of three Ku Klux Klansmen charged with spraying four black women with birdshot from shotguns in April. The third was convicted on the minimum charge of assault and battery.

After the first night of disorders, the U.S. Justice Department ordered an FBI investigation to determine whether the Klansmen had violated any federal civil rights laws.

Flower power wins day

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The eight-week bow-and-arrow rebellion in the New Hebrides ended peacefully today — a week before the archipelago gets independence — when 200 British and French soldiers landed on the island of Espiritu Santo and were greeted with garlands of flowers, officials said.

Rebel leader Jimmy Stevens, a former bulldozer driver who took over Espiritu Santo on May 28 with a band of tribesmen armed with bows and arrows, was on hand to meet the 100 British commandos and 100 French paratroopers.

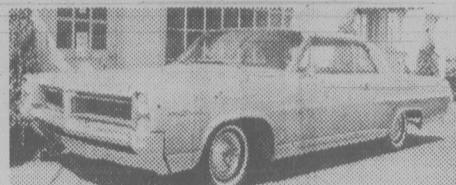

French officials said the joint force will act quickly to restore supply lines of food and other provisions interrupted by the revolt.

Killer rains in S. Korea

SEOUL (Reuter) — Torrential rain sweeping across central South Korea killed at least 78 people and left about 20,000 homeless, national relief headquarters said today.

It said 72 people were missing and about 8,000 houses were destroyed in the storms that triggered landslides and flooding.

Some newspaper reports put the death toll at more than 100 and said 85 were injured.

Relief officials estimated damage at more than $58 million.

Vietnamese first mate in Games space launch

MOSCOW (UPI) — In a space spectacular timed for the partly boycotted Olympics, the Soviet Union Wednesday sent aloft a Vietnamese cosmonaut who once fought American pilots in the Vietnam War.

Lt. Col. Pham Tuan, 33, was the first Vietnamese spaceman in what was also the first launching of a non-Western astronaut.

Pham Tuan is flight engineer of a Soyuz-37 mission to re-supply two Soviet cosmonauts in space.

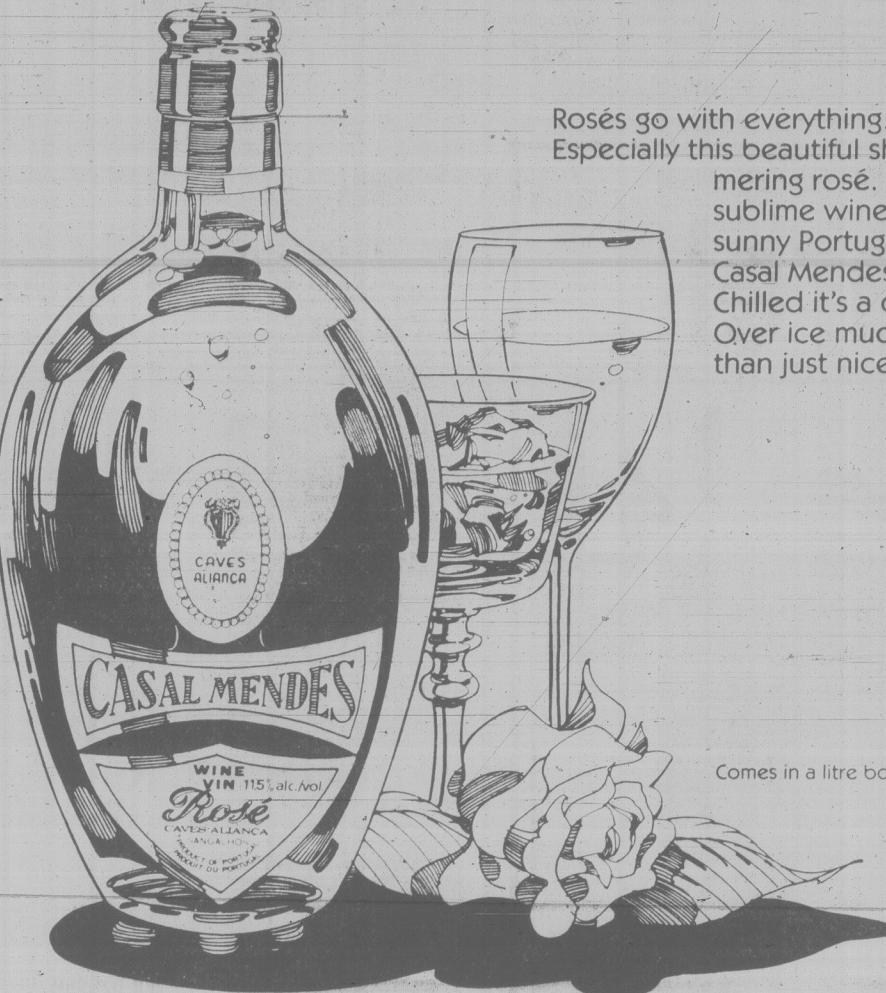

The Vietnamese and his mission commander, Soviet space veteran Viktor Gorbatko, 45, headed for a docking today with the U.S.S.R.'s Salyut-6 orbital laboratory and the two Russian cosmonauts who have been at work in the station since early April.

The official Tass news agency said the fresh crew will stay in orbit for one week, then return to earth. The Salyut-6 team, Leonid Popov and Valery Ryumin, will stay in orbit; they are believed to be trying to break the 175-day space endurance record.

Previous Soviet flights have been made by cosmonauts from East Germany, Poland, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. Tuan is the sixth non-Soviet launched into space by the U.S.S.R.

Things are looking Rosé.

Rosés go with everything. Especially this beautiful shimmering rosé. A sublime wine from sunny Portugal. Casal Mendes. Chilled it's a delight. Over ice much more than just nice.

Comes in a litre bottle.

abby

Dear Abby:

My boss jingles the change in his pocket constantly, which drives me nuts!

Whenever he stands up, he puts his hands in his pockets, then it's jingle, jingle, jingle until I want to scream. He stands by my desk while doing this.

I told him it bothers me, and he said, "Oh, it bothers my wife too, but it's an old habit I can't seem to break."

Abby, how can I help him break this old habit? He knows it's irritating to me and others, but he goes right on doing it.

Up a Wall

Dear Up:

Ask him if he really wants to break the "old-habit." And if he does, try this: As soon as he approaches you, ask him if he has change for a $5 bill, a $10 bill, or whatever it takes to deplete his coin collection. Repeat this procedure daily. End of problem.

Dear Abby:

Since it was recently graduating time, as well as the season for weddings, please say something in your column about thank-you notes.

These people have the time to send graduation invitations (or announcements) to people they haven't seen in years. The same for weddings, and even to some bridal showers! They just put anyone they can think of on the list, no matter how long it's been since they last saw him. Just get those gifts rolling in!

A thank-you note takes less than 15 minutes to write. The stamp is only 15 cents and the card or note paper is about a dime. They get a gift worth $10 or more. That's a pretty good return on such a small investment.

But what gets me are people who don't even acknowledge the gift with any kind of thank-you note. Tell me, Abby, do you think good manners will ever make a comeback?

R.C.

Dear R.C.:

Good manners have never been out of style. Unfortunately, there will always be those who are too lazy, thoughtless or ignorant to use them.

Dear Abby:

A few years ago, I underwent two cornea transplants — one in each eye. I have seen your columns urging people to donate their organs. Maybe the two corneas I received came from people who got the idea from your column. Abby, I can only praise your work in this area. It means the world to those of us who have benefited from it.

Seeing Again

Thank you for the letter as well as another opportunity to let readers know that they, too, can give the gift of sight. To get a donor's card, call your local health unit.

Smallest family still shrinking

By DEREK SIDENHUS

The average Canadian family has shrunk in size to the smallest it's ever been in the country's history.

And there appears to be no change in the downward trend.

But that's no cause for alarm.

Dr. Ben Schlesinger isn't worried, and he's an authority on the Canadian family.

Schlesinger, 51, a professor with the Faculty of Social Work at University of Toronto, looks on the bright side.

Sure the average family is down to only 3.5 members but there are still 350,000 births every year in this country, he says.

"We're not dying out," he adds confidently.

Schlesinger, in Victoria to give a three-week seminar on the Canadian Family at University of Victoria, says the big family is a thing of the past.

An increasing number of couples are waiting until they are in their late 20s and early 30s to have a child, and then they are only having one.

By 1985, he predicts, 15 to 20 per cent of all Canadian couples will opt not to have any children at all.

Schlesinger notes some dramatic changes in the Canadian family over the past two decades.

Fewer people are getting married. The 1978 Canadian total of 185,523 was 2,000 less than the previous year.

By the same token divorces are up — 57,155 in 1978, a 2,000 increase over the year before.

The trend is due, he feels, to a combination of events — the post-war baby boom, relaxation of the divorce laws in the late 50s, and an "epidemic" in separations.

"Marriage is difficult. It's hard. But many couples just aren't prepared to work at it. They look to the easy way out."

There is a greater likelihood of divorce in the early stages, he says.

Half occur in the first 10 years of marriage and 45 per cent of those couples are childless.

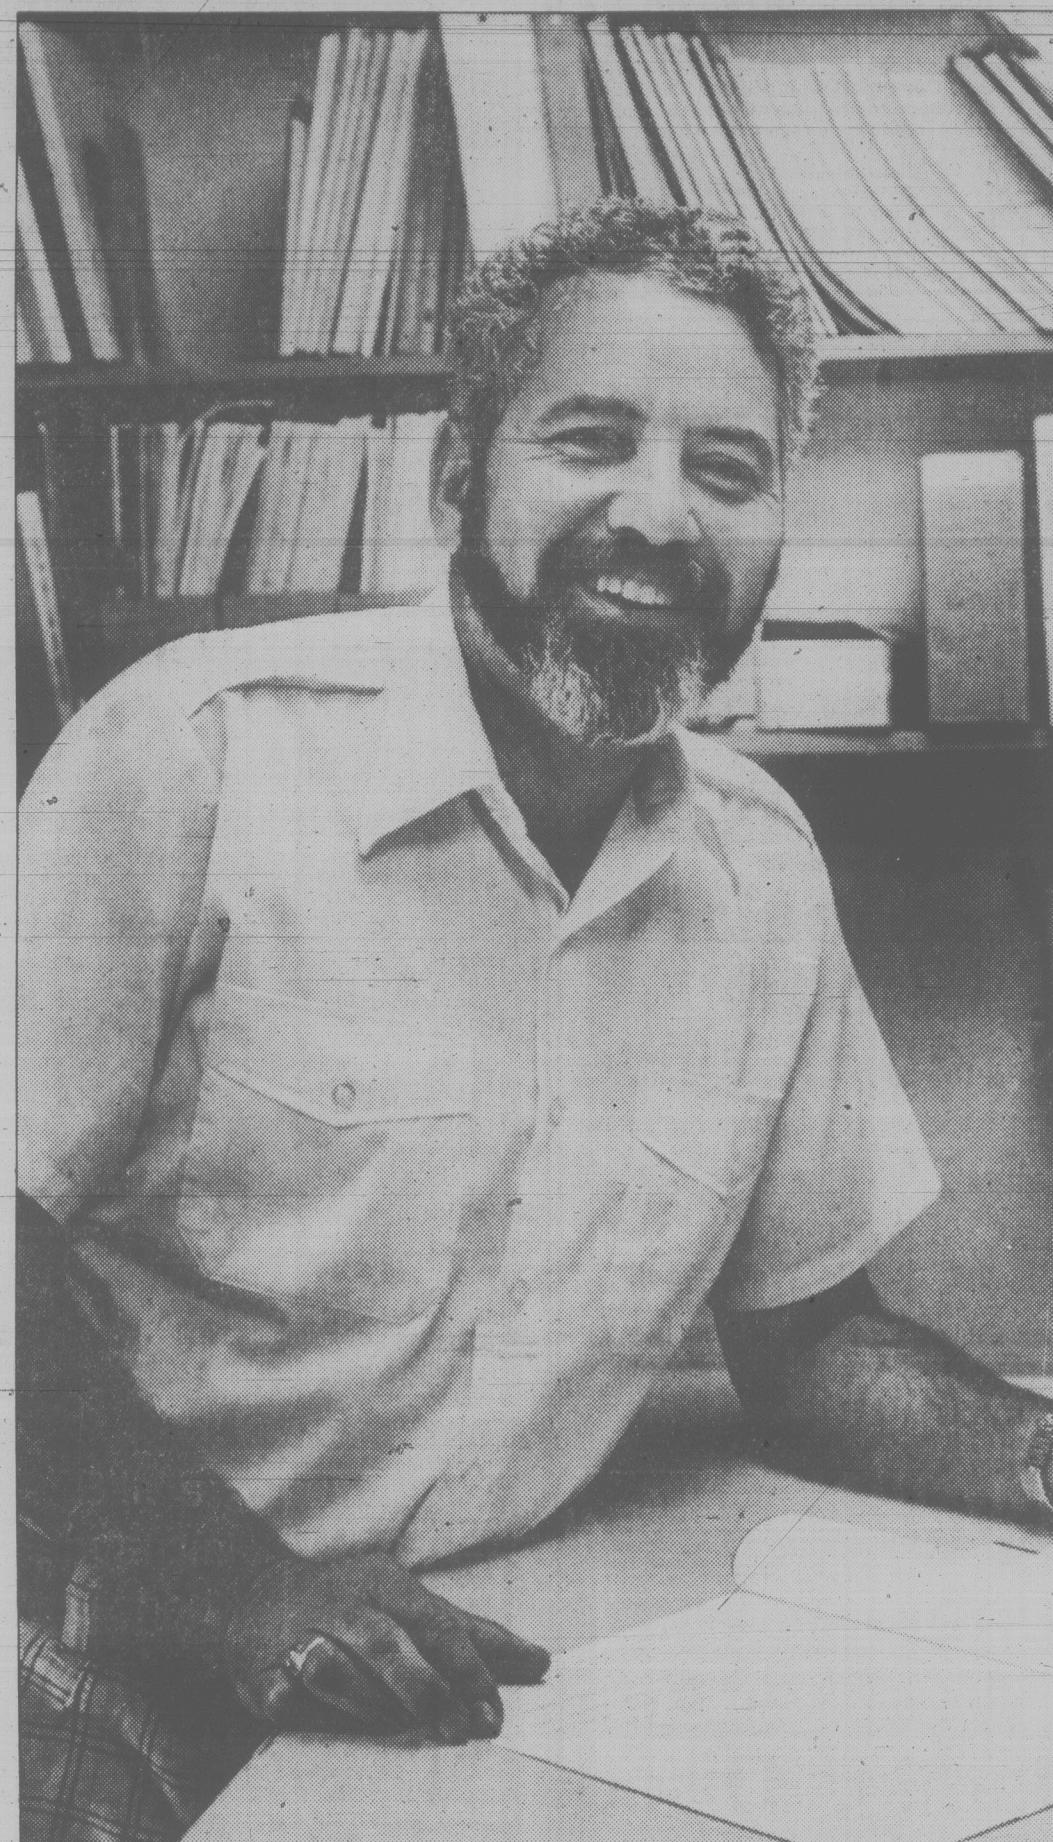

A quarter of all marriages these days involves at least one of the persons marrying for the second time. Third and fourth marriages are rare.

Schlesinger says the divorce rate can't help but continue to rise.

Why? Because the number of women, 19 and under, getting married is still relatively high — 20 per cent of all brides — and that group as a whole has a three times greater chance of ending in divorce than couples who marry later in life.

Schlesinger says one family in 10 is now headed by a single parent — the mother 83 per cent of the time and the father the rest.

In 1978, 10½ per cent of all children up to the age of

Dr. Ben Schlesinger . . . at University of Victoria for three weeks says big families are passe as more couples opt out of parenting 24 living at home were in single-parent families.

He says an increasing number of single non-married women are having babies and keeping them.

Last year one baby in 10 was born to a single non-married women.

Half were to women under 19 and of those 80 per cent elected to keep their babies.

The single mother and child is the fastest growing group in Canada, he says.

"Before, a woman would have been forced to put her child up for adoption. But now it is more acceptable for them to be together."

Schlesinger says the trends are reflected in all English-speaking societies.

Statistics gathered in Australia, New Zealand, Great Britain and the United States are much the same as here.

He can only wonder what the long-term effects may be.

He notes, for instance, that women comprise 40 per cent of the work force and 60 per cent of them are married.

"There are more and more latch-key children coming home to empty houses because both parents are having to work. What has it done to the family? I don't know."

But the big mystery in family research is not so much the family that has problems but rather the family that is able to cope and manage on its own. Surprisingly there's been no research into the subject though such families comprise the vast majority.

"We don't know what the ingredients of lasting families are," he said. "They might be communication, commitment, flexibility, not taking people for granted, allowing each member individuality, love, affection, caring . . . but those are just hunches."

Schlesinger, the author of 10 books on various aspects of Canadian family life, says solutions to family problems may be found through a closer examination of what makes healthy families tick.

Schools also have an important part to play by providing more instruction in family planning and family life.

Some school systems are offering courses in family studies. But the courses are electives.

"It should be a compulsory subject," Schlesinger says. "The family is not an option."

He believes governments should be taking a greater interest in fostering and helping not only the troubled families but the coping ones, too.

By and large Canadian government policies have been anti-family, he says.

The income tax system is an example. It taxes family allowances.

Other countries are more enlightened. France, for instance, gives couples with children discounts on public transportation and has set up vacation spots for families who couldn't otherwise afford to take a holiday.

In Sweden and Norway child-care services are heavily subsidized with industry paying most of the shot.

Belgium is so concerned there is a union of families and the government has a separate ministry of family life, something Schlesinger would like to see happen here.

"I think we have to begin by not always focusing on the tragic, the odd, the atypical but focus more instead on the coping, the managing family so children may become our most valuable asset, not oil."

Burn treatment takes a special team

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

The understanding of burns and their complications has expanded tremendously in the past 30 years. This newer knowledge is responsible for the fact that many people who might have died are now alive.

So complex is the treatment for burns that burn centres have been constructed all over the country. There, teams of physicians, surgeons, specially trained nurses, immunologists, chemists and engineers combine their talents to perfect life-saving techniques.

Burns are classified into three main types. First degree burns affect the outer layer of skin, or epidermis. Pain, tenderness, redness and swelling accompany this type of burn. This is the average "kitchen burn." The immediate application of cold is valuable here, too, but a severe second degree burn should be seen by a doctor or by an emergency room attendant.

One of the problems is to prevent infection of these vesicles, or blisters.

Second degree burns damage the outer layer of skin and also involve the underlying dermis. This type of burn is usually associated with all the symptoms of the first degree burn, except for the addition of blisters of varying size. The immediate application of cold is valuable here, too, but a severe second degree burn should be seen by a doctor or by an emergency room attendant.

Third degree burns are the very severe ones that affect the skin, the tissue beneath the skin, the muscles, the nerve endings and the blood vessels. That which determines the greatest threat to life is the extent of the burn and the percentage of the body surface that was damaged.

vere burns can produce a life-threatening picture of shock which involves the whole body mechanism. The typical picture of shock is a rapid fall of blood pressure, marked increase in the rate of the heart, increased respiration and a cold, clammy appearance.

One of the most serious aspects of burns involves the respiratory system.

Is there any high pressure salesmanship involved? Do you have to sign a contract? If so, be sure you are getting your money's worth!

Numerous reputable self-help weight management organizations (both commercial and non-commercial) are available. Most offer very good programs that include behaviour modification and exercise components as well as realistic diets that basically cover all four food groups in Canada's Food Guide. There are even weight control programs for adolescents offered. The most widely known non-commercial organization include TOPS, Canadian Calorie Counters, and Overeaters Anonymous. Weight-Watchers International, Counterweight and Diet Workshop are commercial but are recognized leaders in the weight management field. Or contact your provincial dietetic association or local health unit nutritionist for names of approved nutrition counselors and to check on other weight management groups. War baby impact felt TORONTO (CP) — They're the Dr. Spock babies, born during the baby boom between 1945 and 1965, and by 1985 they will have a "dynamic impact on business and government" because of their numbers, superior education and tremendous power.

The females of that group who were born at the peak of the boom in particular will signal a profound change in the North American lifestyle, delegates to the first global conference on the future were told Wednesday.

Jeanne Binstock, director of Consumer and Management Trends Inc. in Ottawa and a former New York sociologist, said that even now the female half of the baby boom has reached age 30 and "already we are beginning to see the effects of their decisions."

Binstock said industry is being influenced by this age group as more and more women enter executive and professional positions because of better education.

"And the declining fertility rate has meant more women are and will spend most of their lives in the workforce."

She noted that no name has been found yet for women in their 30s who have chosen not to bear children.

"We used to call them spinsters — which was sort of a connotation that they did not indulge in sexual activity. Spinsters were usually looked upon as shrivelled-up prunes and regarded as poor souls."

However, because of the growing number of women entering universities, the high rate of divorce and the sexual revolution, government and industry must realize that females will be a powerful force to be reckoned with, she said.

Her research has shown that by the year 2000, 30 per cent of the women of child-bearing age in North America will choose to remain childless, 40 per cent will either bear one or none and the remaining 40 per cent will have one or more children.

However, these latter women fall into the category of teenage unwed mothers, Hispanics, rural dwellers and women who maintain deep, religious and ethnic backgrounds."

She said that because of the power this age group will command, the necessity for passage of the U.S. equal rights amendment will be a "big issue in the 1984 election."

Binstock used graphs to illustrate how women have in the last 40 years moved dramatically into the information field in increasing numbers.

"They've moved into the information sector because it has a lot to do with computers," she said. "But they're also being quickly represented in accounting, health, government services and the media."

She refers to them as Dr. Spock's babies because it was Benjamin Spock who taught their mothers through his handbook on child raising how to deal with the psychological needs of children.

"And because of improved medical technology ... modern appliances and the easy availability of contraception, their mothers were able to devote more time on the psychological aspects of child raising."

"Consequently, North America will see very soon a rising, powerful group of women."

Pursuit of wellness 'only for the brave'

TORONTO (CP) — There's a new type of health being touted — wellness — but it's mainly for the brave.

"We live in an illness culture," Dr. Donald Ardell said during his address to the first global conference on the future. "You almost have to be a hero to pursue a well attitude."

Ardell, a tall, strapping young man from California who has written a book — High Level Wellness — is the new guru for total health but says that it is quite distinct from patient education, preventive medicine or holistic health.

"Wellness is not related to illness," he said, "and not everyone is ready for high level health."

Wellness is a matter of "not asking your doctor what he or she can do for you but what you can do for yourself."

Ardell said that with medical costs doubling every five years, wellness is more than a necessary alternative lifestyle.

"The key consideration is that motivation is a positive one and the rewards and satisfaction people get from constantly devoting themselves to excellence."

Ardell said the medical profession — rather than spend time on preventive medicine — should legitimize wellness and raise society's expectations.

"Yet there are all sorts of medical insurance programs that don't encourage people to avoid illness. For a better, healthier future we must turn this around."

Ardell said that wellness assesses food practices, gives images of positive health, offers ways to avoid "burnout," teaches people their "hassle index" and stress management all in the name of total well-being.

He said that exercise programs always warn people to consult their physicians before embarking upon them.

"I say, 'People should get a complete medical if they don't intend to exercise.'

"Maybe some day workers will actually be able to call into work and instead of saying they're sick, they'll boast to their employers that they are well."

Computer crimes listed in manual

TORONTO (CP) — The U.S. justice department gave names to various computer crimes in a recently-published manual. They are:

— Data diddling — entering a system and changing what is there into what you want to be there;

— Trojan horsing — giving secret instruction to the machines so you get unauthorized information;

— The salami technique — shaving a little amount off a series of accounts and depositing it in your own. One bank employee took only one cent off each account;

— The trap door — taking the so-called debugging codes which are left in the computer system to correct errors and using them to circumvent the system;

— The logic bomb — making some dire consequence follow a certain act.

One paranoid executive had set all the personal data in his company to disappear if he was ever fired;

— Asynchronous attacking — manipulating the machine's instructions so it does tasks in an order that you decide;

— Data leaking — taking all the information out of the machine;

— Piggybacking — Using somebody else's identification code to get into the system to do the dirty work.

Pepin grounds glider for good

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin has turned down an appeal by grounded transatlantic flyer Eagle Sammont to wing his way to Paris on a motorized hang glider.

Pepin decided early today to clip the daredevil's wings permanently because the flight could have endangered his and other persons' lives, said one of the minister's aides.

"It was a nice idea but he (Pepin) has to lay down the law," said Geoff Seaborn. "It's not just a question of air regulations. It's a question of safety."

The cost of a search and rescue operation, which a transport official Wednesday speculated would be "astronomical," was also taken into account by Pepin, he said.

Optimism at constitution talks

By GARY KINGSTON
VANCOUVER (CP)

The foreboding sense of failure hanging over the constitutional talks appeared to lift somewhat Wednesday with a receptive response to a Saskatchewan proposal agreeing to enshrine the concept of a Canadian economic union in a new constitution.

The proposal — and a federal commitment to take a serious look at it — is apparently the kind of compromise move that Roy Romanow, Saskatchewan attorney-general and co-chairman of the talks, said would have to be made if the talks were to be successful.

He began his flight last Friday from Farmingdale, N.Y., despite warnings from Federal Aviation Administration officials there that he needed a certificate of inspection for his glider, a single propeller craft driven by a two-cylinder snowmobile engine.

His planned route would have taken him across Labrador and northern Quebec, across Frobisher Bay to Baffin Island, and from there to Greenland, Iceland, Scotland, England and Paris.

That position still is on the table, but at least now there is what appears to be an acceptable compromise proposal to discuss, he said.

Romanow also indicated in presenting his proposal to the media Wednesday afternoon that negotiators were at an impasse on the contentious issue.

But after the provincial ministers had met for 2½ hours in a private suite at the downtown hotel where the third week of the summer-long talks are being held, Romanow said there was no more impasse.

The federal position says that safeguards should be secured in the constitution to prohibit discriminatory actions by provinces against the movement of people, goods, services and capital. Under the federal proposal, questions about provincial laws impeding the operation of an economic union would be made in the courts.

The Saskatchewan draft would entrench in the constitution the concept of an economic union but, instead of depending on the "negative instrument" of constitutional prohibitions and the courts for enforcement, would rely on what Romanow calls co-operative federalism and enlightened self-interest.

It says the governments should be committed to the "on-going, systematic and co-operative review by them of the operation of the Canadian economic union."

The suggestion is that the review could be done by an annual meeting of ministers.

Justice Minister Jean Chretien, chief federal negotiator, said he is happy that Saskatchewan has recognized the principal of an economic union. Federal lawyers now will examine the province's proposal, he said.

The Quebec contingent, which had submitted a proposal similar to Saskatchewan's, also indicated progress had been made.

"Quebec is rallying around the Saskatchewan proposals as are many other provinces," said Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin.

In his statement accompanying the draft, Romanow asked that, considering the Saskatchewan compromise on the powers over the economy issue, the federal government remove its insistence that the issue be linked to the issue of resources.

Divine Madness to hit T.O.

TORONTO (CP) — The world premier of Bette Midler's concert documentary Divine Madness will be the highlight of Toronto's film festival this September, says the festival director.

The singer, the star of The Rose, will make a personal appearance but will not perform when her movie closes the 10-day Festival of Festivals with a gala screening on Sept. 14, says Wayne Clarkson.

The stars and directors of the films chosen for gala presentations on each of the remaining nine nights — which will include a reception honoring the filmmaker and the participating country — also have been invited to attend.

The films so far announced for the gala showings include the Canadian film Mr. Patman, starring James Coburn and Kate Nelligan; a French entry La Banquière, with Romy Schneider; the Polish feature The Conductor, with Sir John Gielgud and Hungary's La Confidence, written and directed by Istvan Szabo, named best director at the 1980 Berlin film festival. Szabo has also confirmed that he will attend.

Following a festival tradition of paying tribute each year to one national cinema — German, Quebec

Australia and Sweden have been highlighted in the past — 10 new French films will be screened this year because Clarkson believes "there is no question that the French cinéma of the last year and a half is very much revitalized."

WIN A SUMMERFUNDING

Play it daily and be eligible to win
weekly prizes.
It's easy and it's fun — just follow the instructions

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNDING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNDING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you arrive at the letter E and the instructions read: 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter. SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist.
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNDING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNDING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game rules.

HOW TO ENTER

Complete the puzzle and fill in the "PASSWORD" on the entry form. Clip out the entry form and send it to us in an envelope with the puzzle number printed in the top left hand corner of the envelope. (As illustrated)

Be sure to include your name, address and phone number on the entry form.

Enter as many times as you wish but make sure each entry is in a separate envelope.

Mail your entries to:
"Summerfunding"
Post Office Box 1390
Victoria, B.C.
V8W 3C4

A new puzzle will appear each day, but the weekly winners will be selected from all entries submitted for the previous week's puzzles.

To be eligible, your entry must be received by 5:30 p.m. on the Thursday following the week the puzzle was published.

Enter daily, or as often as you wish, but be sure each entry is submitted in a separate envelope.

Sellers offered all personalities but his own

New York Times

Peter Sellers, the British actor of many faces, died early Thursday in London's Middlesex Hospital. He had been rushed to the hospital Monday following a massive heart attack. He was 54 years old and had suffered several heart attacks in recent years.

Years ago, when the screen career of Peter Richard Henry Sellers began to gather momentum, he told an interviewer: "As far as I'm aware, I have no personality of my own whatsoever to offer the public. I have nothing to project."

But project he did, confronting audiences with a vast array of comical characters, voices and accents, at times by portraying several completely different persons in the same film. He gained his greatest acclaim with two single roles created by him and representing his range as a comedian from the wildly farcical to the impressively evocative.

The two characters were the blundering Inspector Clouseau in the box-office success The Pink Panther and its four sequels, and the critically admired part of a stuffy, not-so-bright labor union functionary in I'm All Right, Jack, a sardonic look at British labor-management relations.

Sellers started in the films as a junior crook in the Alec Guinness vehicle The Ladykillers in 1956 and established himself firmly with The Mouse That Roared, a 1959 release in which he played three roles, including that of a duchess. Despite a severe heart attack in 1964, he was Britain's foremost film comedian by the mid-60s.

The Pink Panther opened its run as the star was recovering from the nearly fatal attack in April 1964. Its success led to the sequel, A Shot in the Dark, released the same year, and the subsequent films, Return of the Pink Panther and The Pink Panther Strikes Again, that made the rounds in 1975 and 1976 and The Revenge of the Pink Panther in 1978. The last two were among the highest grossing comedies ever made, each producing revenues of approximately $100 million.

Sellers was well equipped for his versatile gallery of portrayals in the comedies that made him famous. He was a medium-sized man with unspectacular features, an owlish expression accentuated by horn-rimmed glasses and a flexible mouth.

This was the face that audiences seldom saw. Instead, behind deft makeup, they saw the bald president of the United States, a crisp British officer and the creepy/spastic nuclear expert in Doctor Strangelove or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb. Or they saw the mousy milquetoast in The Battle of the Sexes, the bumbling motion-picture projectionist in The Littlest Show on Earth, the aging general in The Waltz of the Toreadors, and the shadowy Quilty in Lolita.

More recently, Sellers played the Chinese detective, Sidney Wang in the 1976 release Murder By Death, a Neil Simon farce. The critics found that his Oriental imitations had lost their charm and also dealt harshly with him for making frantically mindless pictures such as The Great McGonagall, in which he played Queen Victoria, and Undercover Hero, which had him tackle six different roles, including Hitler and a Japanese prince. The critics were not amused.

However, his portrayal in Being There of Chance, the hero of the screenplay that Jerzy Kosinski wrote based on his own novel, won critical plaudits.

Sellers was at his busiest in the 1960s, with productions seemingly chasing each other, and his contributions to the British balance of trade and humor was duly recognized when he made the Queen's birthday list in 1966 as a Commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Sellers once explained how he achieved his diverse impersonations.

"I work on the voice. After the voice comes the look of the man. I do a lot of drawings of the character I am to play. Then I get together with the makeup man and we sort of transfer the drawings onto my face."

"After that I establish how the character walks. Very important, the walk. And then suddenly something strange happens. The person takes over. I stare at my own image in the mirror waiting for the other fellow, the man I'm going to portray, to emerge — to stare back at me. And then it happens. I have the feeling that the film character enters my body as if I were a kind of medium. It's a little frightening," he said.

His ancestry included both the Victorian-era prime minister, Benjamin Disraeli, and Daniel Mendoza, the Portuguese-Jewish boxer who was England's bare-knuckle champion.

Sellers was born in Southsea, where his parents were performing in vaudeville. He thought of himself as a Jew but not religiously. His mother was Jewish but he was educated in a Roman Catholic school.

Sellers, who was later to earn more than $1.5 million a year, spent his extra-scholastic days in sleazy theatrical boarding houses and the dreary backstages of provincial music halls. With plans of becoming a musician, he learned to play the drums and the ukulele and managed to gain fruitful employment as a drummer.

During World War II he served in Burma, India and the Middle East as a Spitfire armorer.

Upon his return to England at the war's end he was finally booked into London's famous vaudeville house, the Windmill Theater, in which he did comic turns between nude acts.

There was also a round of dull, small-town stands until a phone call to the British Broadcasting Corporation, in which he introduced himself to the radio producer with two different voices, brought him an audition and a steady job.

On the BBC, he became an institution and a constant source of delight to listeners with his vocal impersonations on the Goon Show series on which he and his fellow self-styled Goons, Spike Milligan, Harry Secombe, Eric Sykes and Michael Bentine, behaved in irreverent, zany styles.

The series ran for seven years, followed by successful stands in top-flight vaudeville.

As his fame grew, Sellers continued to discount theories on acting methods and techniques. He attributed his acting abilities to intuition alone.

Sellers is survived by his wife, Lynne Frederick, an actress.

FEARLESS-FOSDICK FERRET named Shazam proved a ferocious crime-fighter when a burglar broke into a Winnipeg home this week. The pet's owner Glenn Eros arrived back from work to find a would-be thief nursing a badly bloodied arm where he had been bitten by the 36-centimetre-long, 0.7-kilogram critter. By holding the intruder at bay, the ferret foiled a fast get-away.

Bank rate drops to 10.18

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada rate dropped to 10.18 per cent today from 10.35 a week earlier, as consumers began to benefit from lower interest rates.

In the U.S., meanwhile, Chase Manhattan Bank today reduced its prime rate by one-half percentage point to 10.75 per cent, undercutting the 11-per cent rate adopted throughout the U.S. banking industry Wednesday.

Chase, the third-largest U.S. commercial bank, declined to comment on its move. But analysts had been predicting the prime rate would fall below 11 per cent amid sluggish demand for business loans.

One week ago, Chase followed Citibank, the second-largest bank, to an 11.25-per-cent prime rate. But this week, other banks made cuts to 11 per cent.

If its competitors match Chase's new rate, the prime will be in the unusual position of being lower than the Federal Reserve Board's discount rate, which is the fee the board charges on loans to banks. The board's rate now is 11 per cent.

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay-television should be introduced in Canada but only after action has been taken to improve television service in northern and remote communities, says a committee of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission.

The committee, in a report released today, says pay-TV should not be the means for improving service in areas that now get little or no television.

The committee also it would be "an unwise example" to make transmission of TV signals picked off American satellites legal, even as an interim measure, just because so many people are breaking the law in remote areas, the committee said.

Picking off U.S. satellite signals violates agreements with that country. Licensing of earth stations is the responsibility of the federal communications department under the Radio Act.

Perhaps the most high-profile alleged violator has been Dr. Pat McGeer, B.C.'s science minister. He protested federal regulations by pulling in American signals with a deep-dish antenna set up on the lawn of the provincial legislature in Victoria.

The committee says that after an agreement is reached with the U.S., the commission should consider applications for the delivery in areas now served by pay-TV after

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mass poverty, malnutrition, overcrowding, food shortages and deterioration of the planet's water and atmosphere resources — that's a bleak U.S. government prediction that says civilization has perhaps 20 years to act to head off worldwide disaster.

The three-year U.S. government study released today warns that the world faces those grim problems unless nations co-operate as never before to head them off.

In response to the Global 2000 Report to the President, President Carter has written top government officials that unless decisive action is taken to halt the current trends, the next 20 years may see a continuation of serious food and population problems, steady loss of croplands, forests, plant and animal species, fisheries, and degradation of the earth's water and atmosphere.

The presidential report estimated real food and energy prices at least doubling by the turn of the century and the gap between rich and poor growing wider.

The report said its findings "point to increasing potential for international conflict and increasing stress on international financial arrangements."

The study, headed by the President's Council on Environmental Quality and the state department, said that, if anything, it is probably too optimistic.

President Carter, who ordered the study in 1977, immediately announced appointment of a Presidential Task Force on Global Resources and Environment to recommend top-priority studies "as soon as possible" and to provide a progress report within six months.

The report did not suggest specific policies, but concluded that "sustainable economic development, coupled with environmental protection, resource management and family planning is essential."

The report included these findings:

World food production may increase 90 per cent from 1970 to the year 2000, but population will swell more than 50 per cent from about four billion in 1975 to about 6.35 billion in 2000.

Per-capita food production, therefore, will increase only about 15 per cent and those already eating well will get most of the increase, leaving the poor of South Asia, the Middle East and Africa with little more food, and maybe less, than they get now.

Farmland will increase only about four percent; increased food production must rely on techniques using oil and natural gas, causing food prices to spiral upward along with energy prices.

Priests arrested by Bolivian army

LA PAZ (CP) — Soldiers and armed civilians loyal to Bolivia's new right-wing military regime have arrested 11 priests and raided several Roman Catholic parishes, church officials charged Wednesday.

The arrests began soon after last Thursday's military coup blocked the anticipated democratic installation of a left-wing president. None of the 11 priests have been heard from since they were detained, church officials said.

"Some parishes have people hiding from the government," said an American priest who asked not to be named.

Trattner said the department believes the military has taken some of its prisoners to a center near the capital, La Paz, where they are being beaten and tortured.

Diplomatic sources said opponents of Gen. Luis Garcia Meza's new regime set dynamite to the Pamajasi water works in the mountains above La Paz, reducing water pressure in the city.

The military command has set up machine-gun nests at some public utilities and deployed tanks, armored cars and troops at strategic points.

In the tin and zinc mining region south of La Paz, miners claimed to be resisting troops sent to subdue them in Oruro, and Potosi, about 416 kilometres southeast of La Paz.

The miners radio said several bridges had been blown up on highways east of La Paz, stranding travelers.

It said 5,000 peasants were gathering near the Siglo Veinte mine, 240 kilometres southeast of the capital, "and we are organizing with miners into an effective army."

A high-ranking church source said the papal nuncio, the Vatican's representative to Bolivia, asked the government to account for priests who have disappeared since the takeover and provide guarantees for the safety of church officials.

The source said the government replied it would not recognize any church request until interim president Lidia Gueiler had left the nuncio's La Paz residence, where she had sought asylum. The source said Mrs. Gueiler has a safe-conduct pass from the government and planned to leave shortly.

The military ousted Gueiler in order to head off the expected choice by Congress of Hernan Siles Zuazo, a leftist, as presi-

Billy's Libyan link probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An agreement among U.S. Senate Republican leaders today apparently cleared the way for a congressional investigation of Billy Carter's ties with Libya and the way his case has been handled by the Carter administration.

A spokesman for Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said Baker and senior Republican members of key Senate committees in the case decided to accept a Democratic proposal for a seven-member investigation group drawn from the judiciary committee.

In lengthy sessions Wednesday, Republicans had pressed for a larger special committee similar to that which investigated the Watergate political espionage scandal during the administration of Republican President Richard Nixon.

Billy Carter registered under protest last week as a foreign agent for Libya and said he received $220,000 in payments from the Libyan government which he said were the first installments of a $500,000 loan.

On Tuesday, the White House announced that the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, used Billy Carter as an intermediary last fall in seeking Libyan assistance to free the U.S. hostages in Iran.

The commission has threatened to prosecute some operators for illegally transmitting those signals while promising to ignore the majority of antennas which provide the only service in their area.

The commission is estimated there now are about 700 to 1,000 deep-dish antennas, most of them in remote communities in British Columbia and the North, used to pull in U.S. pay-television programs off U.S. satellites.

The commission has threatened to prosecute some operators for illegally transmitting those signals while promising to ignore the majority of antennas which provide the only service in their area.

It says the commission should call immediately for applications for satellite delivery of Canadian programs to such areas.

In the meantime, while hearings on those applications are held, the federal communications department under the Radio Act.

Car crashes kill 2

Two women died in separate traffic accidents Wednesday and police say luck prevented further fatalities in a third mishap.

Dorothy Patricia Varney, 39, of 2268 West 45th Ave., Vancouver, was killed when the van in which she was riding was in collision with a car and camper truck south of Mill Bay on the Trans-Canada.

The woman is believed to be from the U.S.

Another unidentified woman from the same car is reported in serious condition in Cowichan District Hospital.

The driver of the camper, Raymond McKee of Fruitvale, and his wife were treated and released from hospital.

Three people received minor injuries in a five-vehicle accident on the Pat Bay Highway at McDonald Park Road Wednesday about 11:05 a.m. but police say it was just luck that prevented worse injuries.

Sidney RCMP say the accident occurred when a farm tractor swerved to miss a highway sign lying by the side of the road.

The tractor was hit from the rear by a second vehicle and the pile-up began.

The vehicles were coming from the ferry and traffic was rerouted for an hour until they were removed and the highway cleaned.

Escapers captured in cafe

Three escapers from William Head prison were captured Wednesday night after city police were called to a disturbance at Coffee Mac's restaurant on Gorge Road.

Stephen John Thomas Johnson, Gary Allan Smith and Raymond Edward Kilien, were arrested — without resistance — about 10:15 after an employee called police.

The trio escaped Monday night from the minimum security prison. A raft believed used in the escape was found at nearby Weir's Beach.

Two escapers who tried to swim from the prison in January are believed to have drowned, and two who escaped in February were later captured.

Three who got away using rafts in two separate incidents earlier this month are still at large.

Oil peace to hike gas 7¢ a gal.?

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canadian motorists will soon be paying seven cents a gallon more at the gasoline pumps (about 1½¢ a litre) if Alberta accepts Ottawa's latest oil-pricing offer — and the cost of gasoline will jump by 16 cents a gallon next year, according to an Ottawa newspaper.

As Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed began day-long energy discussions at Trudeau's summer residence 30 kilometres north of here, today's Ottawa Journal reported the federal government planned to offer Alberta a $2 a barrel rise in oil prices this year with an increase of $1.50 a barrel in succeeding years.

If this is correct, and Lougheed accepts the proposal, oil prices will rise by a total of $2 a barrel this year, including the July 1 increase of $1 a barrel under the old agreement.

Failure to reach common ground today would set the stage for a bitter constitutional showdown the two leaders say they are anxious to avoid.

What's politics without lots of promises? Victoria voters heard dozens of them last November but how many have the winners redeemed?

A good yardstick by which to judge politicians is the gap between promise and performance. A perusal of their pamphlets and the yellowed newspaper clippings recounting campaign speeches from last fall's municipal election has turned up some embarrassments which the candidates would rather forget.

On the other hand, the nine who have been running the city for the last seven months have performed on their promises with more than a passing grade. It may surprise the cynics, but they've done fairly well.

Mayor Bill Tindall was shrewd. He promised only a few specifics and mostly campaigned on his long record of service in elected and appointed positions.

Chinatown's preservation and construction of a convention centre are more or less on the rails but a couple of Tindall pledges related to transit haven't kept well over the months. A picture in his brochure shows the mayor behind the fence at Blanshard and Pandora overlooking the big excavation.

It "could be one of the most efficient and comprehensive transportation centres." The developer who owns this pit has announced at regular six-month intervals that a major business-commercial complex will start construction soon and local politicians and bus planners are still arguing about where a terminal should be built.

The brochure also touts Tindall's role as "moving force behind the free bus program." May it rest in peace — deceased March 31, 1980. There also hasn't been much talk lately of his "comprehensive transportation plan which is aimed at stimulating the Victoria core by offsetting transportation costs for Victoria's citizens."

However, the mayor did endorse Ald. John Cooper's proposal this spring for a full-blown task force to study the city's transit and traffic options, and Tindall is active on the board of the Urban Transit Authority. The jury's still out on this promise.

Bob Wright is delivering in spades on his Chinatown revitalization plans, but his negative remarks on sewage treatment for Victoria also make interesting reading these days, now that he's switched right around.

(His 1977 campaign brochure is also fascinating for its comments on sewage. It shows him gazing thoughtfully over Clover Point with the headline: Our Sewage Fiasco. "Was all this really necessary? Protect your interests on the Capital Regional Board. . . Stop poor planning of sewage facilities.")

I guess former CRD chairman Murray Glazier just took him at his word and gave him the solid waste management task, an unwelcome job everyone perceived as a shaft from a disliked political rival. Wright's brave band is better known in political circles by its unofficial title, an earthy four-letter descriptive prefix.

Personal and political ironies aside, Wright is the guy for the job. Maybe he's the living illustration that campaign promises weren't meant to be taken too seriously, luckily for the voters and taxpayers.

More promises next week.

Opinion shift on centre at hearing

By NORMAN GIDNEY

More than 100 Victorians turned out Wednesday night at a rezoning hearing to rehash the merits and disadvantages of a government-subsidized convention centre on the Inner Harbour.

There were few new arguments trotted out but the evening demonstrated an apparent shift in public opinion in favor of the $8 million project.

When city council first attempted to rezone the property two months ago, speakers from the crowd of 200 who said they opposed the project outnumbered the supporters 2-1.

But on Wednesday night it was closer to an even split.

Thirty-eight people told Mayor Bill Tindall and council what they thought of the project during the 1½-hour session.

Twenty-one of them were against and 17 supported the convention centre on the waterfront Reid site at Wharf and Fort.

Most observers at the hearing expected a rerun of the May 21 rezoning hearing, but what surprised many was the presence of a mostly new crowd of supporters.

Only a few of the speakers in favor were holdovers from the last round of debate, while half of the opponents were from the same persistent group that has constituted the main opposition for several months.

Former Saanich alderman Edith Gunning led off the evening, saying that a waterfront site was essential. It may be the key factor in an organization's decision to choose Victoria for a convention.

Architect Bob Siddall also spoke of the importance of location.

"When we go to Chicago (for a convention) we go down to the basement for three days, which is why conventions won't go to Chicago and will come to Victoria."

Opponents pleaded that the harbor must be kept open as a park for the citizens of Victoria, not reserved for convention-goers only. They also said the Reid site is wrong because it will seriously aggravate traffic congestion on Wharf Street.

Betty Gibbons, 933 Convent Place, said she wasn't opposed to a convention centre as such "but I oppose the current trend towards desecrating the Inner Harbour."

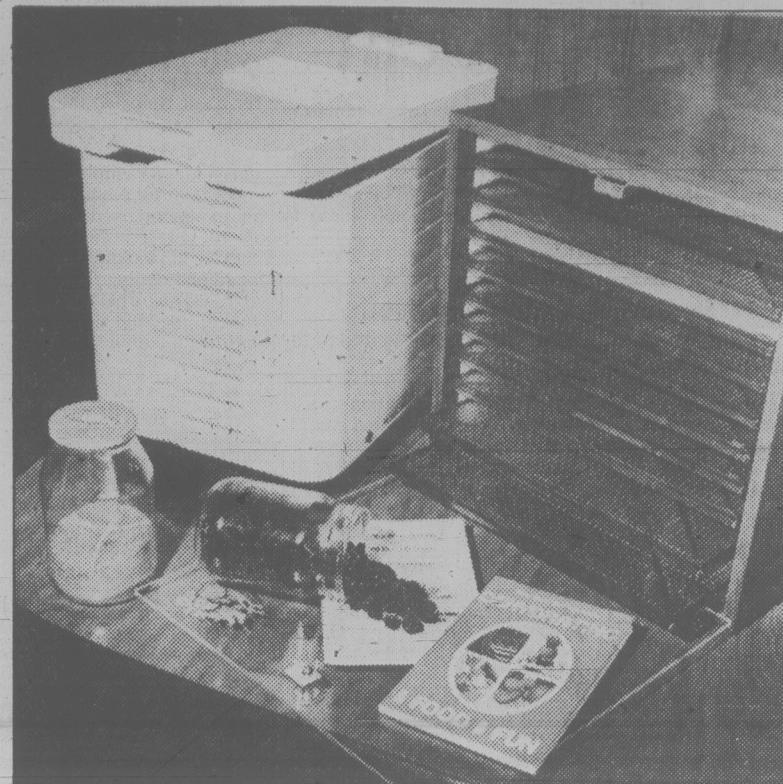

"If, as we are told, conventions are good for business, let business build it."

The same theme was taken up by several people in business in Victoria.

Property manager Hugh Creighton, who said he had offices at 1200 Wharf next to the Reid site, told the audience he spoke for no vested interest group, except the "Society to Protect the Endangered Taxpayers."

Stocking up against uncertainty

By AB KENT

Storing food against an uncertain future is becoming more widespread in Victoria.

Jessie Hall, of Hall's Food for Storage, takes orders for dehydrated foodstuffs on behalf of a Vancouver supplier, Liahon Marketing Ltd. Sales have been largely to members of the Mormon Church, which advocates self-sufficiency and food-stocking.

But lately there have been as many food orders from the general public as church members, Hall said, and the public sector is still growing.

"When volcanoes erupt

and things like that happen, you get more orders."

"People think, 'oh boy, I won't get caught,'" she said.

So they start to lay in supplies of basic commodities like flour, vegetables, fruits, milk, cheese, soup, eggs — all dehydrated and vacuum-packed with nitrogen in gallon-size tins.

Hall said the growing market could support a full-time dehydrated food business in Victoria if she could devote enough time to it. Her price list covers about 50 items, including sweet or sour cream powders, protein supplement, nuts, shortening and butter powders, peanut butter, soybean-based meat substitutes, unflavored gelatin and bacon bits.

The sealed, number 10 tins range from around $8 to $18.25 each, and for $695 per adult a family could lay in a 12-month stock.

Ted and Lorraine Strang of Victoria have their own supply of stored foods but also act as organizers of co-operative bulk buying of grains and food for drying, and sell dehydrators and grain mills in their part-time business called The Grinder.

Their garage contains 4,000 pounds of wheat, of which 20 bushels is for their own consumption to make a variety of custom flours for their bread-baking needs.

People who grind their own grain do it partly for self-sufficiency and economy, but also for better tasting, more nutritious bread without added preservatives.

Howard Biddulph, stake president of the Mormon Church here, said the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints makes no endorsement of dehydrated food, but it does advocate storage of a year's supply of non-perishables and preserved foods. The church does not take part in mass purchasing.

It holds popular public seminars on food storage methods like vegetable and fruit drying. The philosophy is based on a Mormon doctrine of self-sufficiency and preparation for individual needs in the event of economic uncertainty, joblessness or other emergency.

Every individual should have a degree of self-sufficiency, like having his own garden," Biddulph said.

During the Second World War people who stored food, particularly items in short supply, were called hoarders and were not generally admired.

"We don't believe in hoarding," Biddulph said.

"In times of crisis we believe we should share."

Meanwhile the church promotes self-reliance in other ways, by counselling, developing job skills and in some cases finding work for members in economic difficulty.

He said during and after the Second World War the Mormon Church was a main source of emergency relief through a well-organized system of welfare storage and distribution, mainly clothing, bedding and medical supplies.

Primarily for its church members in need, the system is also available for relief wherever needed, such as last year's Guatemala earthquake.

The system is organized on a regional basis, with Calgary serving all of western Canada. Plans are to have another storage facility in Vancouver, including foodstuffs.

No change with police

The limited strike by Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt policemen continues with no talks scheduled.

The mayors involved said earlier this week that the situation is not healthy and they were considering the options that were available.

However, no details were given, no action has been taken and the policemen continue, as they have since June 9, wearing civilian clothes to work and refusing to do certain paperwork.

Bob Almgren, who had been involved as a mediator in the dispute, was tied up earlier in the week with the construction industry negotiations.

Union spokesman John Langley said the move would prevent a possible lockout Friday by the three major breweries.

He made the comment following a request from the 'Brewery, Wine and Distillery Workers Union for him to appoint an industrial inquiry commission into the dispute.

Union spokesman John Langley said the move would prevent a possible lockout Friday by the three major breweries.

But Heinrich said he has no intention of jumping in prior to the lockout deadline.

"I don't think that we

Minister won't move to avert beer cutoff

HEINRICH . . . pass the lemon juice should precipitate or make any rapid move," he said.

"Everybody has the opportunity to lock out or go on strike and it may very well be that's the direction they should go for a while."

Langley said no new moves are planned before Friday in the deadlocked talks, raising the prospect of a beer drought almost immediately.

Negotiators for Molson, Labatt and Carling-O'Keefe breweries gave the union until midnight Friday to accept their final offer or face a lockout.

The companies are offering a $1-an-hour increase in each year of a three-year contract, while the union is pushing for a $1.05 increase in each of two years.

The current rate for workers on the bottling line is $10.10 an hour.

But Langley said the main stumbling block is union security.

"They want a revolving-door type of arrangement, so you build up a big pool of people working at low rates without job security," Langley said.

He said the union is filing an unfair labor practice complaint with the Labor Relations Board over the companies' insistence that temporaries — who are not union members but are represented by the union in bargaining — get no increase.

He said the union's 1978 agreement with the breweries gave the 150 temporaries or permit holders a 60-cent-an-hour increase in 1978, but nothing in 1979. The new contract proposal would give nothing in the next three years and Langley said he believes the companies could use lower-paid temporaries to undermine the union.

Drop-in for dropouts

A former confectionery and newsstand will become a drop-in centre for dropouts in Greater Victoria School District for the month of August.

Counsellor Wally Dilay will make the downtown storefront at 644 Yates — formerly Tunnel News — a focal point for youngsters who have left the school system but who may want counselling on their future direction, whether it is more education or a job.

Taking the school system into the street is a move aimed at reaching youngsters turned off by the conventional classroom experience.

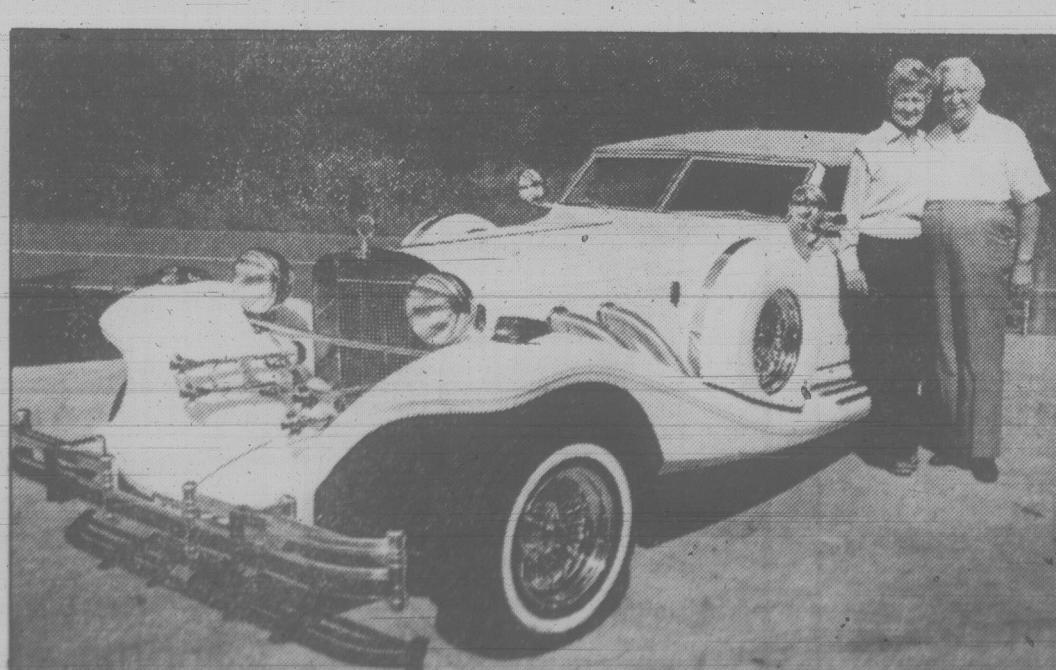

The storefront will have a telephone for answering queries of youngsters who don't want to appear in person.

But to make the service fully accessible a counsellor will cruise the streets at appropriate times using an Easter Seal van with the seats replaced by lounge furniture to encourage dropouts to talk about their problems.

The pilot project of School District 61 has the support of downtown businessmen, who have been concerned lately about street children; police department youth workers, and the Boys and Girls Clubs of Victoria.

It will be assessed at the end of the project before school reopens in September.

If successful the arrangement could become a forerunner of new educational techniques being explored by the district, Camosun College and the University of Victoria.
